New Chinese Emperor? She Stayed Up 3 Days

Will Europe Have War?

Plenty of good news for Japan. One item, even more important than the acquisition of 95,000,000 new Chinese subjects, is the birth of a second son to the Empress Nagako. All Japan shares the delight of her imperial husband.

The baby weighs 2849 grams, about six and a quarter pounds, is twenty inches long and healthy. That is official. You wonder whether this new baby, or his older brother, will be the first Japanese "Emperor of all China."

The League of Nations, fifty-two to one, "gangs up" on Italy, England and France denouncing Mussolini for doing what they both have done.

Japan, seizing the psychological moment, moves into China, taking over railroad centers, moving in war planes. Highly efficient are the Japanese.

The world may change when Japan harnesses old China as science harnessed Niagara. China's 400,000,000 have the conquering man power; Japan will supply the intellectual turbines to utilize the power.

Did Washington read a short Associated Press dispatch telling how the old German airship Graf Zeppelin, arriving at Rio de Janeiro in time for the rebellion, stayed up in the air for three days looking on? When the revolution settled down, the Zeppelin settled down also, delivered her cargo, passengers and mail, took on another load, ready for the return trip. The dirigible could have stayed up a week longer.

This country should have such ships, many of them, for transatlantic mail and passenger work and as lookout stations along our coast. Uncle Sam should start without waiting for Germany to send her new supergiant dirigible, LZ-129, soon to sail over.

Cannot the United States do what Germany does? We have a great airship plant, its machinery lying idle, we have the engineers, skilled workmen. What we lack is government initiative.

Do you pour out sweet sympathy on England and her allies, trying to protect "Ethiopian civilization"? Perhaps you haven't read reports by British government officials on slavery in Ethiopia. This, published in the British "East Africa Year Book" for 1933:

"Slave owning and slave raiding is still carried on in Ethiopia, and our military resident at Moyale, Capt. D. E. Cochrane, complained of actual slavery conditions in what he termed 'hell,' not only about slaves captured in raids, but about children purchased in slavery from parent; exporting that in southern Abyssinia a good eight-year-old child brings from 40 to 60 dollars."

Ethiopian chiefs get rich—for Ethiopia—selling their subjects into slavery, and the British call of fathers and mothers selling their children for "forty to sixty dollars" each. The League of Nations and our Washington dodos will not let Mussolini interfere with that situation. According to British official reports, there are two million slaves in Ethiopia.

The French Chamber of Deputies met with 50,000 police, soldiers and Republican Guards to keep order.

France does not like her connection with England and fifty other countries against Italy. Laval does not like it either, but his mind is on Germany. He would need England if anything German happened.

Mussolini moves some of his best Alpine regiments from the Jugo-Slavian to the French frontier; other troops from the Austrian frontier to the French border.

What the English will do is always uncertain. France would not like a new war with a new Germany and Italy this time siding with the Germans.

Mussolini calls 100,000 more fighting men from the farms to their regiments. England and France, leading the 52 nations united against Italy, wonder just what Mussolini means by sudden military maneuvers. The intelligent English and French surely cannot imagine that Mussolini will allow himself to be throttled without some real war.

The Austrian preparations are about completed to put the handsome young Otto on the throne, occupied and sadly mismanaged by his Hapsburg ancestors.

"He alone can save Austria from national Socialism and from being annexed by Germany," is the excuse in this case. The real fact is that, like a great many other countries, Austria does not know how to rule itself.

JESSE LIVERMORE JR. SHOT BY HIS MOTHER

JESSE LIVERMORE, JR. MRS. DOROTHEA LIVERMORE

Son Bullet Victim, Mother Accused

Santa Barbara, Cal., Nov. 29 (AP)—Jesse Livermore, Jr., 15, son of the famous Wall street operator, was fatally wounded early today.

Under-Sheriff Jack Ross said Livermore's mother fired the shot.

The youth's condition was described as critical.

The shooting, police were informed, occurred at the Montecito mansion of Mrs. Dorothea Livermore, divorced wife of the financier.

Mrs. Livermore was taken to a hospital in an hysterical condition.

Ross said both Livermore and his mother had been drinking.

"I was notified of the shooting by Dr. Neville Usher, who was summoned to the Livermore home by a guest who witnessed the shooting," Ross said.

"I went to the hospital, where

Worcester Holdup Laid to 3 Youths

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 29 (AP)—Three Worcester men were held in $5000 bail each after pleading innocence in municipal court to breaking and entering.

They are Erie Carlson, 24; John Reidy, 26, and Thomas Dillon, 19. Police said they broke into a filling station and attempted to steal a safe. Deputy Chief James F. O'Neil said Worcester detectives identified them as having Massachusetts records, and believed they were connected with a recent $3200 Worcester holdup.

U.S. TO CUT DEBT, SAYS ROOSEVELT

MYSTERY IN SLAYING OF GIRL, 20

Westford, Nov. 29—Murder with a love motive was revealed, authorities believe, with the finding today of the body of Miss Frances Gallagher, 20, whose head had been nearly severed by a shotgun blast.

Medical Examiner Francis E. Bulkley said he was unable to convince himself the girl was a suicide.

The body was found on the girl's bed in her room in the farmhouse of her uncle, George O'Brien, on Vose road. The house is in an isolated section, five miles from Chelmsford Center.

The shotgun was found leaning against the bed.

DOCTOR MAKES TESTS

The medical examiner made repeated tests, while lying on the bed, and said she could not see how she could have fired the charge herself.

He sent for state police, Sergeant Michael Noonan and Trooper Charles Purse responding, followed later by Detective Sherlock and O'Neil, who were sent by Detective-Captain John F. Stokes.

Two uncles of the dead girl, her sisters, Elizabeth and Helen, who are nurses at Lowell General Hospital; a brother and a former neighbor, Edwin Warren, 30, were also questioned.

Frances lived with her uncles, George and Joseph O'Brien, who are unmarried. She cooked their meals and worked during the day as a nursemaid for Warren's children.

FOUND BY UNCLE

At 9:30 a. m., Warren called on the O'Briens in the grain store where they work in South Chelmsford and told them that Frances had not arrived at his house.

George O'Brien went home and found his niece dead on the bed, clad in her silk undergarments, stockings and slippers.

He said he found the gun resting beside the bed, near her feet, and after examining it, placed it against a wall.

He said he had found also that the gun would have fallen to the floor even if the trigger had been pulled while it was leaning against the bed.

The girl's condition was such that she could not have moved after the gun was fired. One piece of her skull was found in the corridor, three feet from the bedroom door.

Abe Faber's Sweetheart Now Bride

Less than six months after execution of the Millen brothers and Abe Faber, the latter's former sweetheart, Rose Knellar of Dorchester, 24, has become a bride, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The girl, who testified at the trial that $3850 in bank loot she turned over to detectives was given her by Abe as a pre-nuptial wedding present, was married last Saturday.

Her bridegroom, the Evening American learned, is Frank D. Zeuli, 25, of Cottage street, East Boston, shoe factory bookkeeper and night law school student at Boston College.

Revelation of the marriage came through a friend of the former Miss Knellar, who declared it to have climaxed a whirlwind romance of less than two months.

At City Hall, Mrs. Hilda H. Quirk, registrar of marriages, refused to deny or affirm that the marriage had taken place. She declared that the matter was not of public record and would not comment further.

Three hours later, however, Mrs. Quirk made the records public, saying:

"Since this marriage was made public several hours ago by the Boston Evening American, I know of no reason why I should

STOCKS OFF $1-$3

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Heavy selling attributed by some brokerage circles to the increased tension between England and Italy sent the stock market into a slump which depressed many leading issues $1 to $3 a share today.

Selling was in such volume that the ticker fell slightly in arrears for a time, but caught up soon after midday. Brokers with European connections said foreign selling was not of exceptional proportions.

Rome said that in view of the sweeping advance of the past several weeks, traders had been showing an increasing disposition to take profits, despite continued favorable domestic business news.

STATE SHOWS SURPLUS—CURLEY

Governor Curley today stated that the fiscal year for the state will end tomorrow with a surplus, the amount not yet determined.

He made this announcement following a conference with Chairman Charles P. Howard of the Commission on Administration and Finance.

The governor said he is gratified at this situation because of expressions of "extravagance" in certain quarters.

He said that during his regime as governor, money has been borrowed for the state, in many instances, at the lowest rate in history.

He said the showing is especially gratifying in view of the demands made on the State due to the depression.

BONDS AMORTIZED

The Governor added that state bonds, especially those for highway work, have been amortized over a period of 10 years.

Governor Curley said it must be disconcerting to some persons who hoped the situation might have been otherwise.

The Governor said he will leave for Washington tonight with his secretary, Edmond Hoy, and Adjutant-General William Rose, and will return Sunday.

MILLION FOR HARBOR

He also stated that he was told today by General Markham, of the United States Army that $1,000,000 has been put in the budget for dredging Boston harbor and that it is expected Congress will pass the budget early in January.

The governor said he is not satisfied with this, having been assured earlier by President Roosevelt that $1,000,000 would be available immediately and that it would be only a beginning.

The governor said he hoped for $4,500,000 would be available for dredging the harbor.

Danno Held In Vise Probe

Detroit, Nov. 29—Danno O'Mahoney of Ireland, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, suffered his first setback since coming to the United States when he was being detained by United States immigration authorities here today.

They declared a new visa on his passport. The present vise was signed in Dublin, Ireland, on November 12, 1934.

O'Mahoney came to the United States on the steamship Bremen on December 15, 1934. He then started the mat campaign which resulted in his winning the world's championship by scoring victories over Jim Londos and Ed Don George.

It was revealed here today that after being in the United States for six months O'Mahoney was granted an extra six months permission to remain here. This would give him the right to remain in this country until December 15.

18 MONTHS LIMIT

The Irish wrestler told immigration authorities he recently filed an application in Boston to be permitted to remain in the United States until next June.

Under the law 18 months is the longest period a foreign subject can remain in this country. They are then obliged to return to their homeland and come back to the United States on new passports if they wish to return here.

O'Mahoney wrestled in Toronto last night, and got into his difficulties with the immigration authorities when he arrived here this morning in the company of Jack McGrath, his American manager. Danno is scheduled to wrestle here tonight.

RELEASE IS PROBABLE

The immigration authorities detained the Irish wrestler in their offices in Detroit. They then communicated with the immigration office in Boston.

They were informed by Boston that the necessary extensions had been applied for and would probably be granted.

It was expected the technicalities in connection with O'Mahoney's case would be cleared up later today and the wrestler permitted to show here tonight.

Redskins Drop Casey as Coach

Eddie Casey, former Harvard football coach, is through as coach of the Boston Redskins after next Sunday's game with Pittsburgh, the Boston Evening American learned today.

With only one year filled, Casey and George Preston Marshall, Redskins' owner, will tear up Casey's two-year contract by mutual consent.

It is understood that Casey will drop football coaching entirely, devoting his time next year to the National Youth project, of which he is head in Massachusetts.

NO NEW TAX, SEES END OF DOLE

Atlanta, Nov. 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today the government "has passed the peak of appropriations" and can "look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit" without new taxes.

He addressed a great throng gathered on Grany Field for the Georgia homecoming celebration in his honor.

Repeating determination to end the dole, Mr. Roosevelt announced that 3,125,000 had been taken off relief rolls, and were at work on last Wednesday.

Orders already have been issued, he added, for the remainder of 3,500,000 employables to go to work.

Contrasting conditions today with "those fool's paradise years before the crash," the President evidenced optimism. He contended "the credit of the government is today higher than that of any other great nation."

In the dark days of 1933, he said, great bankers told him the government could stand a debt of from 55 to 10 billion. Today, he added, it stands at 29½ billions, including one and one-half billions of working balance and four and a half billions of recoverable assets.

"We Are Solvent"

Looking at the broader economic picture, he recalled that in 1933 the nation's debts—public and private—exceeded its assets. Since then, he continued, the debt burden has been cut while values have increased so that "today we are once more on the way back."

"We were insolvent; today we are solvent," Mr. Roosevelt concluded.

He did not mention his critic, Governor Talmadge of Georgia, in his prepared address.

Over and over he repeated that

BRITISH FLEET THREATENED BY 'DEATH' FLIERS

MUSSOLINI SHIFTS ARMY TO BORDER OF FRANCE

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 29—A new European crisis arose today over the League of Nations' project for an oil embargo against Italy, with responsible sources asserting Premier Mussolini has evolved a counter-program—including a swift thrust at the British fleet.

Meantime, in Geneva, it was announced that the meeting of the League of Nations committee of 18 to consider imposition of the oil embargo was set for December 12.

Responsible persons, not officials but holding high connections, said a fresh conflict—perhaps another world war—would result if the League applied the oil embargo in addition to its present sanctions to cut short the Italian warfare in Ethiopia.

Il Duce's program in reply to an oil ban was said by these persons to include withdrawal of diplomatic representatives from "enemy" countries, resignation from the League, and an attack on Britain's Mediterranean fleet by Italy's aerial "death squad."

IL DUCE CALLS CABINET

These sources said the three-point program was adopted by Mussolini and the Fascist grand council at their November 18 midnight session.

Il Duce called a cabinet meeting for tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Any war arising from extension of the League of Nations penalties against Italy, responsible sources said, would be a precipitate conflict, with Italy striving desperately to break through the barriers of the besieging League states.

The Italian navy's aerial "death squad" was reported to be a force of 125 pilots, each carrying a single great bomb in his plane and pledged to dive upon an "enemy" warship, going to certain death.

DENIAL FROM LONDON

Il Duce's decision to employ such tactics, in the event the projected oil embargo was enforced, was said by the unofficial sources to have been communicated to British Ambassador Sir Eric Drummond here last Saturday by Mussolini himself.

They said it also was made known to Premier Pierre Laval of France and Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare of Britain early this week through Italy's ambassadors to Paris and London.

The Rome reports that Mussolini advised British officials of a determination to resist oil sanctions against his mechanized East African warfare with further war moves evoked a quick denial from the London foreign office.

British officials insisted Drummond's call on Mussolini November 23 concerned another matter, and that sanctions were not mentioned. They said Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London, gave no such intimation to Sir Samuel Hoare.

French officials reported at Paris that Italian Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti repeated to Premier Laval yesterday Il Duce's previous warning that an oil embargo might mean war.

An Italian government spokesman, interpreting the phrase "oil embargo means war," said a new conflict would be "another step which might eventually lead to European hostilities."

Informed Italian sources said it was this program which brought about indefinite postponement of the meeting of the League sanctions committee of 18, originally set for today, to consider application of an oil embargo.

(This meeting was called off at the request of Premier Laval, but League officials in Geneva said France was not opposed to oil sanctions, and that they expected a date for application of this measure to be set early in December.)

Britain Reported Sure Of Support by France

Copyright, 1935, the Associated Press

Paris, Nov. 29—Great Britain was reported by informed sources today to have achieved its long-sought assurance of French support in case of an Italian attack on the British in the Mediterranean.

It was stated that Premier Laval, who previously delayed League of Nations action on the proposal of an oil embargo against Italy, had given in to the British demand for action on the subject, thereby wrecking Italian hopes for further delay.

Yielding to the insistence of British Ambassador Sir George Russell Clerk, these sources said, Laval made clear to the Italian ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, that if Il Duce did anything "desperate" in the Mediterranean, France and other League of Nations powers would stand solidly, unreservedly, behind Britain.

The European crisis arising from Italy's war in Ethiopia and application of League penalties against the Fascist nation thus approached a climax, diplomatic sources said, reviving hopes Italy might soon be ready to consider negotiating a settlement.

A high Italian authority was reported by the noted French commentator, Pertinax, to have said addition of an oil embargo to the sanctions already being applied "would very shortly make continuation of the war impossible."

Lacking supplies to press her East African conquest, Pertinax suggested:

"Italy would be all the more incapable of facing eventualities she might cause to arise elsewhere.

"Hasn't the time come to open friendly negotiations?"

Washington Wonders If Duce Is Bluffing

Washington, Nov. 29 (INS)—Is Benito Mussolini bluffing?

American officials today believed that in the answer to that question rests the peace of all Europe.

Genuine apprehension was felt in official quarters over Rome reports that the Italian dictator had re-called 100,000 men to the colors and that he may again strengthen the Italian forces near the Anglo-Egyptian frontier.

This move was seen here as Il Duce's answer to the British foreign office's statement that Britain intended to go ahead with plans for imposition by the League of Nations of an oil and steel embargo against Italy.

By his actions, Mussolini was seen as warning London and Paris that if the oil embargo is imposed Italy will retaliate with military forces which may plunge Europe into another general war.

Badoglio Clamps Lid On Italian War News

Asmara, Eritrea, Nov. 29 (AP)—A rigid censorship on news dispatches was clamped down by the new high commissioner, Marshal Badoglio, today.

Under the censorship, no information of Italian military moves may be given and no names of commanders, including his own, may be mentioned.

The correspondents here will be held responsible for what their newspapers publish.

ITALIANS LOSE WALWAL, SAYS ETHIOPIA

Addis Ababa, Nov. 29 (INS)—Ethiopian forces have retaken Walwal, on the border of Italian Somaliland, according to an official announcement.

Walwal was the scene of the border clash of December 5, 1934, that precipitated Italian military action in Ethiopia.

Earlier reports said that an Ethiopian column was driving towards Walwal after recapturing Gorrahei and Geriogubi, but all claims of Ethiopian successes on the southern front were denied in Rome.

Italy today also denied the loss of Walwal.

Italian Bombs Wreck Town of Daggah Bur

Addis Ababa, Nov. 29 (INS)—Regarded as an act of revenge for "recent defeats," Italian airplanes yesterday destroyed the town of Daggah Bur, in the southeastern part of the country, it was officially reported today, and many women and children were allegedly killed.

Ten airplanes dropped a hail of 1500 bombs on the town, according to Ethiopian reports.

Most of the bombs were incendiary, and the whole town was set ablaze.

News of the bombing caused a huge sensation in Addis Ababa.

Jesse Livermore, Jr. Shot by Mother

ascertained that both Livermore and his mother were intoxicated.

"Mrs. Livermore was placed under arrest at the hospital, with a guard at her bedside. She is still too intoxicated to talk.

"From what I learned in talking to a guest at the home, D. Nevelle, the mother and her son became engaged in an argument over his drinking.

"Mrs. Livermore told the boy she would rather see him dead than drinking to excess. The boy then went to a closet, got a .22 rifle, and handed it to her, saying: 'Well, here you are.'

DOUBT BOY WILL LIVE

"Mrs. Livermore took the rifle and fired. The bullet entered the boy's chest. His condition is critical and it is doubtful if he will recover."

The youth is being attended by Dr. Ussher and Dr. Irving Wills. Fears were felt that the single bullet he received may have penetrated his liver.

The boy's brother, Paul, 12, was in a guest cottage at the estate at the time of the shooting, and did not witness it.

The butler also told officers he was not near the portion of the house where it occurred.

DIVORCED IN 1932

The mother was the divorced wife of Livermore, having married him in 1917. They were divorced in 1932. She later married J. Walter Longcope and was divorced from him last year. She was the former Miss Dorothy Wendt of Brooklyn.

The boy's father is one of the most famous figures in American finance, credited with having made and lost several fortunes running into the millions of dollars.

At the age of 25 he entered Wall Street shortly after the turn of the century, and played a prominent role in the copper boom of 1905. He was reported to have emerged from the 1907 panic with $3,000,000.

Steel and wheat drew his interest in the ensuing years, and shortly before 1920 he was credited with having taken $10,000,000 from the Chicago wheat pits as the result of his brilliant maneuvers.

HARD HIT IN 1929

Although noted for his ability to switch from the "bull" to the "bear" side of the market in the ebb and flow of finance, Livermore was reported to have been hard hit in the 1929 collapse of stock prices.

Since then little has been heard of him save for two days in December, 1932, when he mysteriously dropped from sight after leaving his Park avenue, New York, apartment for the office of his broker. He returned safely home the next day, after fears that he had been kidnaped had been raised.

Livermore has been married three times.

In March of the present year Livermore made application to return to the grain market in Chicago as a trader. He had been suspended more than a year ago after he had entered voluntary bankruptcy in New York.

Wounded Livermore Boy One of 2 Sons

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Jesse Livermore, Jr., who was seriously shot in Santa Barbara, Cal., early today, was one of two sons of the widely known Wall Street operator and his former wife, who was Miss Dorothea F. Wendt.

They were married in December, 1918. After a Reno divorce in September, 1932, Mrs. Livermore married Walter Longcope of New York, former prohibition agent. This marriage ended in a divorce in August of last year.

Since her divorce from Longcope she has used the name of Livermore.

Livermore, who was known as the "boy plunger" of Wall Street, was married in March, 1933, to Mrs. Harriet Metz Noble of Omaha, Neb.

He has been living in New York and has not been active in Wall Street since he filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in March, 1934.

MAID'S Tears Win LIBERTY

JUDGE SWAYED IN THEFT CASE

Salem, Nov. 29 — A girl who wept and said she deserved to go to jail, melted all hearts in court here today.

Nora Downey, 24, will have another chance.

Even the man she stole from pleaded for her with the judge and will probably give her back her job.

She was placed on probation by Judge George R. Sears who suspended a year's jail sentence. He ordered the girl to make restitution of $150 and warned her to live up to the good that everybody saw in her.

Trap Is Set

Nora Downey is employed as a housemaid in the home of Abraham Pett, on Moffatt road.

Pett testified he had set a trap for a thief who was sneaking into his wallpaper store on Essex street almost every night and stealing from the cash register.

He hid behind a counter and when the door opened he snapped on the lights. To his surprise it was his trusted housemaid that he found, he said.

After the arrest Mr. and Mrs. Pett decided to ask police to drop the serious charge of breaking and entering in the night time and place a lesser charge of larceny against the girl.

Needed Funds

This was done in court today, and the girl, without a lawyer, faced Judge Sears before a crowd that filled the courtroom and said:

"I deserve to go to jail. I wanted money badly and I found the key to the store in the house. I took it and used it. I don't know what I am going to do now. I haven't any job or any place to go."

Pett told Judge Sears the girl was an industrious worker and should be "given a break." After court he said he believed that he and his wife would take the girl back. They will talk it over tonight.

Fortier Resigns As Dewing's Aid

Ovide V. Fortier, assistant district attorney for two years on the staff of Edmund R. Dewing, Plymouth-Norfolk prosecutor, announced in Dedham today that he had tendered his resignation effective December 1.

Fortier, a resident of Plymouth County, will be replaced, it is understood, by Hibbard Richter of Brookline, a member of the Republican town committee.

Beyond saying he had tendered his resignation, Fortier would not comment. Nor would Richter, who referred questioners to District Attorney Dewing.

His appointment will give Norfolk County three of four places on the prosecutor's staff, Robert G. Clark, Jr., being the only Plymouth County man remaining.

Other assistants are George W. Arbuckle of Quincy and Harold J. Smith of Wellesley, where Mr. Dewing also resides.

TUT'S DIREFUL CURSE

Man Who Slept in Tomb Stricken

New York, Nov. 29 (AP) — Dr. James H. Breasted, elderly Egyptologist who was among those first to enter Tutankhamen's tomb and who since scoffed at the supposed curse on its violators, was seriously ill today of an "undetermined" malady.

At first diagnosed as tropical malaria, his illness today was said by hospital authorities to be "not satisfactorily diagnosed as yet."

"Dr. Breasted spent a fairly good night, but his condition is serious," the hospital announced.

He was taken to medical center from the incoming liner Conte Di Savoia, yesterday.

Dr. Breasted, director of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, and for thirty years an explorer of Egypt's temples and tombs, was returning from the Valley of the Nile when stricken.

DEFIED TUT'S CURSE

Before sailing for Egypt, he described the Tutankhamen omen as "hummyrot."

"Death shall come in swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of a Pharaoh," is the inscription in heiroglyphics at the famous sarcophagus in the Valley of the Kings, near Luxor.

"I defy that 'curse,'" Breasted declared, "and anyone was exposed to it, I was. For two weeks I slept in the tomb of Tutankhamen and took my meals there. I never felt better."

The prophecy failed to deter any original explorers at the tomb, and it has been ridiculed frequently since the opening in 1924. Several who first entered the resting place of Egypt's ancient ruler have since died.

VALUABLE DISCOVERIES

Dr. Breasted, now 74, was present to study chief developments in unearthing the massive tomb.

His findings include the information that gland transplanting is 3000 years old; that Solomon did not make the first sea voyages; that Helen of Troy was real; that Egyptian surgical practices are 4000 years old, and that human conscience dates back to 3000 B. C.

During his latest trip to Egypt Dr. Breasted and his bride of several months, the former Mrs. Imogen H. Richmond, attended the International Congress of Orientalists in Rome in September.

ROSE KNELLAR WED BY NORTH END JUSTICE

not now reveal the records of this registry."

The records revealed that the marriage was performed last Saturday by Antonio Longarini, of 267 Hanover street, North End, justice of the peace, in his office.

They also revealed that application for a marriage license was filed November 18.

In the application, Rose said she was born in Boston, is a secretary and that her parents ewre David Knellar, born in Russia, and Annie (Cohen) Knellar, also a native of Russia, with the mother, now widowed, living in Mallon road, Dorchester.

Zeuli wrote that he wasn born in Italy on December 13, 1911, is a law clerk by occupation, lives in Cottage street, East Boston, and that his parents are Antonio Zeuli and Vincenzia (Jeromino) Zeuli, bott born in Italy.

Rose, employed by a downtown jeweler, deplied the marriage today at the jewelry shop.

Zeuli, after reporting for work as usual in the plant of an East Boston shoe concern, where he works as a bookkeeper at $25 a week, was dunished on hearing that details of the marriage were known.

Studies at B. C.

According to his mother, Mrs. Anthony Zeuli, the youth attends law school nights at Boston College Law School and is in his second year.

Three days ago, the mother said, Frank came home and announced that he was going to marry Rose Knellar, whom the family have never met. His father flew into a rage, the mother said, and ordered his son from the house.

Frank went down the street to the home of his paternal grandmother but all last night he was not at either house, the mother declared.

According to a friend of Frank, the bridegroom has known Rose only six weeks and met her then on the birdie path, where both ride Sunday mornings.

At the bride's home her widowed mother denied flatly that her daughter had been married.

Rose was bridesmaid for Norma Brighton Millen when she was married to Murton Millen, only a few months before Murton, his brother Irving and Abe Faber held up the Needham Trust Company and killed two policemen in making their getaway.

Return Loot

After the bandit trio had been arrested, she turned over $3850 to state detectives, declaring it was money given her by Faber as a wedding present, not to be opened until they were married.

The money was declared to be part of the Needham City Company loot. Faber had said it was a wedding present from a friend.

Rose was arrested on a charge of larceny and later was indicted. After the execution of the bandit trio last June, however, District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing not pressed the indictment. At about the same time it was reported that Rose had become engaged to an M. I. T. graduate.

The former Rose Knellar of Dorchester, whose first fiance, Millen gangster Abe Faber, went to his death in the electric chair a few short months ago, is now the secret bride of an East Boston law student it was revealed today.

Gem Thief Hunted As Woman Beater

Police today sought an alma-be-seeching ingrate who struck Mrs. Emily Neckowitz, 41, of Cypress street, Brookline, in the Public Garden, knocked her to the ground and robbed her of a jeweled pendant and a ring valued at a total of $652.

Asked for alms by the man, who said he was hungry on Thanksgiving night, Mrs. Nackowitz was opening her handbag when set upon by the thug.

CLIPPER LANDS MAIL

Daring Flight Ends at Manila

Manila, P. I., Nov. 29 (AP)—The China Clipper swept to a landing on Manila bay today, completing an 8000-mile flight with the first load of air mail ever carried across the Pacific Ocean.

While thousands lining the shore and scores of boats in the harbor set up a terrific din, the 25-ton transport circled the city a dozen times, accompanied by Army and Navy planes, and then settled down and taxied up to the landing float.

She landed at 3:31 p. m. (2:31 a. m. Friday, E. S. T.), ending an epoch-making flight from Alameda Calif., from which she took off a week ago.

The crew, led by Captain Edwin C. Musick, veteran Pan American Airways pilot, was taken from the float as scores of craft clustered about. They were welcomed by Rear Admiral Orin G. Murfin and Major General Frank Parker.

On a rooftop nearby were Manuel Quezon, newly inaugurated President of the Philippine Commonwealth, and Frank Murphy, United States high commissioner.

Amid the confusion, a government mail boat was aside the Clipper removing 1400 pounds of airmail which was rushed to the Manila postoffice for delivery.

One letter from President Roosevelt to President Quezon, was brought ashore by Captain Musick for personal delivery to the Filipino leader.

Father Wins Plea For 2 Children

Judge Joseph R. McConle in Dedham Probate Court today denied the petition of Andrew C. Dondero of Weymouth that the divorce granted his wife in April be stopped from becoming absolute.

Although the divorce was not reversed, Dondero's other petition that custody of the two children, originally granted to Mrs. Dondero, be transferred to him was allowed.

The second request was granted after attorneys for both Mr. and Mrs. Dondero reached an agreement prior to the hearing.

Dondero testified that since the divorce proceedings in April Mrs. Dondero had been in "constant association and communication" with a certain man."

James Fairweather of South Weymouth, testified that last October he had seen Mrs. Dondero with the man in a Brockton restaurant, and that Mrs. Dondero pretended not to see him.

Mrs. Dondero testified she had seen this man but once since the April divorce, and that time, the Brockton incident, quite by accident.

She denied she had communicated with him.

150 Dead, 1000 Held In Brazil Revolt

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 29 (INS)—Although the hunt for rebels was still being pressed today, the Brazilian government announced the complete suppression of the Leftist revolt and said that about 150 persons had been killed in the four days of fighting.

Various sources estimated between 40 and 60 people had been killed in Rio de Janeiro and approximately 100 slain in the fighting at Pernambuco.

More than 1,000 soldiers of the regular army are under arrest, it was said—nearly 300 having been taken in the Isle of Flores for safekeeping.

The revolt broke out among noncommissioned army officers and is reported to have been of Communistic origin.

DENTAL Drill Pain GOES

IT WON'T HURT IN FUTURE

New York, Nov. 29 (US)—The next time you go to the dentist you may believe him when he says—

"Now this won't hurt you."

Especially when the dentist starts boring into that cavity which kept you awake nights.

Because Columbia University announced today the discovery of a substance which makes a dentist's drill painless. The new substance which "desensitizes" teeth was discovered by Dr. Leroy L. Hartman, professor of dentistry at Columbia after 20 years of research.

Dr. Hartman said that the quality and the price of the chemical would be controlled by the university. The product will be made available commercially in the near future.

Film Bachelors Hit By Ida Lupino

Wants 'Farm' Hubby

Copyright, 1935, International News Service

Hollywood, Nov. 29 (INS)—Girls, don't envy the movie beauties, with their handsome escorts, for the young men of Walla Walla and Sauk Center are easier to domesticate and are better matrimonial prospects in every way.

So declared Ida Lupino, the English actress, today, and filmland tittera, because in "Anything Goes" the blonde starlet has just played opposite one of the cinema's happier husbands—Bing Crosby.

"The general run of men out here," complained Ida, "are inconsistent, erratic, unreliable and they can't be tied down.

"They're very nice to know, and to go out with, but not to marry, thank you. I've yet to see a Hollywood man I'd accept for a husband."

Having lightly tossed this bombshell into the ranks of filmland's eligible bachelors, Ida then explained that it is all due to the pace out here.

"The movie business," she said, "keeps people working at a high speed and under fantastic, often superficial conditions. Relaxation is keyed to the same tempo."

And, pardon it, Mr. Hays, but Ida also suspects it is easier for a man to go astray in Hollywood than in Walla Walla and Sauk Center.

SAMARITAN GIVES AID

William C. Howard, who spent 26 of his 52 years behind state prison bars as a "lifer," quits Boston tonight for Tennessee, leaving behind a friend who was instrumental in gaining a pardon from Governor Curley.

Howard told the story of a friendship of 23 years with Robert Scott of King place, Cambridge, which culminated Wednesday when Howard was granted his freedom.

Scott heard a sermon 23 years ago at his church. The sermon mentioned a lonely man in State Prison who had no one to visit him. Scott went to see Howard, and the friendship began.

Scott worked unceasingly to obtain a pardon for Howard, but the years dragged on without success. Governor Curley heard the plea, and freedom followed.

DENNIS LETTER PRIZE GOES TO LYNN WOMAN

A chubby waif is nestled in the downy softness of a tiny crib at City Hospital. He is a "Baby Dennis."

Somewhere a woman wanders—perhaps aimlessly, hopelessly—presumably with sorrow bearing heavily upon her. She is "Mary Costa," the mother who abandoned "Baby Dennis" in a St. Botolph street hallway.

Everywhere—from metropolitan Boston to Maine's tiniest hamlet—mothers have united in a great, New England-wide appeal. From every heart comes the self-same words:

"Come back, 'Mary Costa.' Come back before it is too late."

Hundreds and hundreds of letters have poured into the Boston Evening American office. Simple little messages they are. But each with a strong appeal.

AN APPEAL TO DENNIS' DADDY

Why doesn't someone write a letter to the father of Baby Dennis" writes Herbert Garey Chase of 408 Main street, Cambridge.

He adds:

"I do not choose to judge "Mary Costa" or her husband, nor do I condemn either.

"I am more than willing to help them and their baby, but not as individuals, since, by law of God, they are a family.

"If only willing helpers could rally round the three and establish them in a home, what rejoicing there would be.

"Both parents should go to the Boston Evening American and reveal the whole truth. I know the editors and readers will help them in every way."

Lynn Winner

The letter of Miss Mary Ambagie of 150 Walnut street, Lynn, seemed unusually good to the editor who awarded her first prize of $10.

Miss Ambagie's letter was as follows:

"'Dear Mary Costa.'

"Years and years ago a child was born to humble parents. His bed was a crude construction of new-mown hay, piled high in a manger. The proud parents peered eagerly over the crib to glory in the supreme happiness that was theirs this moment.

"The mother was a Mary, too—but she had the spirit and courage that has carried her name through all the ages. Little could she comprehend all the greatness that was embodied in HER child.

"Surely, Mary, you want to rejoice in that commemoration—join your baby for Christmas."

Award of $5

Second prize, five dollars, has been awarded Mrs. Belle G. Grossman of 103 Washington street, Dorchester, who wrote:

"'Dear Mary Costa.'

"If 'Baby Denny' had the power of expression, this might be his plea:

"'Pray do not deny me the Divine Gift of mother love. I am destitute, robbed of my birthright. Can't you see that God is offering you his help?

"'In the face of danger, warm-hearted friends found me.

"'They are ready to restore me safely to you and give us aid. God will stand by you if you do right by my innocent helplessness.

"'Make any sacrifice to keep me. I'll be a credit to you some day. Let us enjoy the future together always.'"

Prizes of a dollar each have been awarded to the following: Miss Bernice G. Stern, 224 Beaver street, Roxbury; Miss Alice M. Newton, 144 Miller avenue, Providence, R. I.; Miss Rita Kannaly, 55 Saunders street, Allston; Mrs. S. B. Wurtzel, 389 Dudley street, Roxbury.

Pairs of guest tickets to either Loew's State or Orpheum theaters, where the hilarious comedy, "A Night at the Opera" with the three Marx Brothers is being shown, have been awarded to the following:

Robert Garey Chase, 408 Main street, Cambridge, for his excellent appeal to the father of "Baby Dennis"; to Mrs. Emily J. Wilcox, 65 Pleasant street, Manchester, N. H., and to Mrs. Esther Gilbody, 35 Independence avenue, Quincy.

'Mr. Mae West' in Boston, Still Insists Star Wed Him

"Mr. Mae West" is in town.

And he still insists that the buxom Mae of the movies and curves is his legal spouse.

At least he says he has never learned that she was divorced from him, although he says he understands she may endeavor to get a secret separation in New York courts.

"Mr. Mae West" is Frank Wallace of the novelty dance team of Wallace and La Mae. They will open a four-day engagement in the New Gayety Theater Sunday.

IT'S HER SECRET

Wallace thinks Mae West is grand despite her denial she married him in Milwaukee 24 years ago when she was 18.

"I am still Mae West's husband as far as I know," said Wallace. "I married her while we were both playing in 'Florida Enchantment' but I believe she would deny it even on her deathbed. The marriage was a secret, and she's still keeping the secret.

BEARS MAE TO WED

"I am very much pleased that Mae reached her goal and is on top of the entertainment world now. I bear her no ill-will. We agreed when we parted in 1916, up to which time we lived as husband and wife, that if either of us got to the top we'd help the other. I never thought she'd be so ungrateful. I am the forgotten man and HOW!

"I agreed with Mae and her manager, James Timony, in 1916, the last time I saw her, that I would not interfere with her career or communicate with her in any way. Timony is still her manager and I have been informed he plans to marry her if she gets a divorce.

"No one man can hold Mae West, however.

"The only reason I broke my silence with regard to our marriage was because Mae's sister, Beverly, said I was dead. I would have been dead in the show business if I did not reveal the truth then."

Harry Fields, owner and manager of the show in which Wallace claims he and Mae were playing in Milwaukee when married, met Wallace today in the Boston Evening American office and identified him as the man who married Miss West.

Girl Cut When Train Hits Auto

Bethel, Vt., Nov. 29 (AP)—The automobile of Miss Nellie McCue, 23, of Windsor, was struck by a milk train today and hurled 25 feet against a sign post, but its occupant suffered only from shock and lacerations.

The young woman's head was thrust through a window of her car by the impact. Her only injuries were cuts about the head.

PRISONER BEATS NURSES, FLEES HOSPITAL

Worcester, Nov. 29—Suddenly dropping his pose as an appendicitis sufferer, Toivo Heino, 19, of Fitchburg, alleged auto thief, battled three nurses today in City hospital and then leaped 10 feet from a window to gain his freedom.

He had been "too sick to need a guard," police who took him to the hospital from Worcester told jail officials.

Heino, serving three months in lieu of $110 in fines for drunken driving and driving without a license, and held also in $500 for the grand jury as an alleged auto thief, launched his escape scheme shortly after midnight.

Guards were startled to hear him screaming. They found him doubled over in apparent pain and holding his abdomen.

The jail physician was called and when he probed the supposed sore region, Heino screamed all the louder, and then "fainted."

Night Superintendent Helen M. Hughes and other nurses rushed around getting the operating room in readiness, and ministering to Heino.

Heino leaped from the bed and Miss Hughes grappled with him, thinking he had become delirious.

The other nurses came to her assistance and Heino battled all three, swinging his fists wildly.

After a wild battle, Heino broke loose. He grabbed his trousers and shoes and made for a window.

One of the nurses made a last attempt to subdue him, but she was knocked to one side.

Throwing up the window, Heino leaped to the ground, ten feet below, and dashed away.

DEER ISLE PAIR FACE LONG TERM FOR ESCAPE TRY

Long State Prison sentences loomed today for two Deer Island inmates, captured in a fusillade of shots after their second daring break from the House of Correction.

Less than a month ago the same pair, Neil Uhlman, 18, of Revere, and Leo Delage, 28, of the South End, fled from the jail under cover of a heavy fog and made their way to the Canadian border before being captured.

Last night, after luring John J. Norton, guard, into his cell, Delage beat him into unconsciousness, stripped him of his keys and freed Uhlman.

The pair fled, being hailed on the Winthrop side of Shirley gut after Guard Edward A. McDonald, another guard, spied them and sent a hail of rifle and pistol fire at them.

Evidence in connection with their break a month ago was scheduled to come before the Suffolk grand jury today.

HEARING POSTPONED

Master George F. A. Mulcahy said today this would be postponed, pending the outcome of Guard Norton's injuries. It is expected the evidence in connection with the two breaks will be presented at the same time.

The statutes provide a sentence of four to seven years in state prison for the offense. Thus the pair face a minimum sentence of eight years in state prison if found guilty in connection with both breaks.

Uhlman was serving one year for larceny of an auto and Delage six months for larceny of a pocketbook.

FEIGNED ILLNESS

Pretext of Delage that he was ill caused Norton to enter his cell last night. Delage pounced on him as soon as he passed the door.

Norton, beaten on the head with some unknown weapon, was knocked to the floor and Delage seized his keys. He opened the door of Uhlman's cell and the pair then locked the unconscious Norton in Delage's cell.

They then unlocked a side door to the punishment block and reached the outdoors.

Reproducing the gigantic strains which result in earthquakes within the earth, Professor P. W. Bridgman of Harvard expects to learn much about their nature. This machine can exert a pressure of a million pounds per square inch.

Some explanation of earthquakes may come to light by the use of the new apparatus at Harvard devised by Professor P. W. Bridgman which is capable of imposing pressure of 1,000,000 pounds per square inch.

Experiments with the machine have found new forms of matter in many of the experiments already tried. Latest experiments have uncovered a new form of silver cyanide which may explain the cause of earthquakes.

Poll Heavily Against 'Raw Deal'

New York, Nov. 29—An increase was shown in the vote against the administration in the latest figures in the Literary Digest's 10,000,000-ballot nation-wide poll, announced today.

With an additional 167,000 returns reported, bringing the total to date to 207,087 votes, the standing was announced as 91,351 in favor of President Roosevelt's "acts and policies" to date, and 115,736 opposed.

The anti-administration sentiment rose from 52.28 per cent, shown in last week's balloting, to 55.89 per cent in this week's tally.

The votes so far counted, the Digest said, are from Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma and Texas.

In 1934, a similar poll by the Digest disclosed 28.85 per cent of those voting were opposed to the New Deal.

The magazine said this year's count to date shows only two of the 12 states Georgia and Texas giving a majority vote in favor of the New Deal. Illinois registered the heaviest opposition.

INSULT TO FLAG JARS N. Y.

New York, Nov. 29 (US)—An avalanche of protest smashed down on Communist and Socialist leaders today because of an unprecedented insult to the American flag, offered at a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden, Wednesday night.

Twenty-five red banners were unfurled from the platform at that meeting.

But not one of this country's national emblems was on display!

This neglect of Old Glory aroused the wrath and resentment of scores of city officials and leaders of patriotic and civic groups.

With one voice they condemned the action of Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, and Earl Browder, Communist, in consenting to speak from a dais so desecrated.

With outspoken anger they assailed the 20,000 Communists and Socialists who sat through the meeting without protesting the absence of the flag, under which they live and have protection.

Roosevelt Has 18 States, Says Farley

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Democratic hopes of victory in the 1936 presidential election were bolstered today by a claim of Postmaster General James A. Farley that 18 states already are definitely in President Roosevelt's column.

Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, expressed his views after a swing around the country which he described as "A Quest for Friendship."

The 18 states he named as certain to go for Roosevelt are: Pennsylvania, Ohio, California, Delaware, Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Utah, Nevada, Oregon, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado and Indiana.

5 HARVARD MEN HIT INFLATION

Five Harvard professors of economics today joined 75 other economists in a warning against inflation.

The warning is not directed against the soldiers' bonus but it hits at payment of a bonus by inflating the currency.

"Payments might be made in various ways, but the most dangerous would be the issue of inconvertible paper money in the form of greenbacks as in Civil War days," the statement says.

The Harvard professors who have signed the statement are Charles J. Bullock, J. Franklin Ebersole, Joseph A. Schumpeter, Oliver M. W. Sprague and Frank W. Taussig.

The statement was issued as a result of reports that some congressmen would favor bonus financing by issuance of $2,500,000,000 in fiat money.

10 BEST DRESSED MEN

Edsel Ford Named U. S. Leader

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—America's sartorial pace-setters are its business leaders, a group of New York's leading tailors agreed today in picking a list of ten best-dressed men.

Hollywood contributed only one actor—nimble-footed Fred Astaire.

1—Edsel Ford, Detroit manufacturer.
2—William Rhinelander Stewart, New York real estate operator.
3—Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, New York and Philadelphia socialite.
4—William Goadby Loew, New York broker.
5—Adolphus Busch, 2nd, of the St. Louis brewing family.
6—Marshall Field, Chicago merchant.
7—Isaac Newton Perry, Chicago financier.
8—Richard K. Mellon of Pittsburgh, nephew of Andrew Mellon.
9—Walter D. Teague, New York industrial designer.
10—Fred Astaire, the dancer-actor.

Astaire's high rating is attributable to his recent pictures, especially "Top Hat," one tailor said.

"He has done more this year to encourage the wearing of tailcoats than anybody else," this tailor said.

Edsel Ford was cited as a perfectly dressed business executive.

William Rhinelander Stewart was called by one stylist "the outstanding man in a dinner suit" in New York.

"Tony" Biddle has "a great variety of clothes for any occasion and knows how to wear them."

William Goadby Loew was called the "Beau Brummel of Wall Street."

LORENZ O. K.'S MERCY DEATHS FOR OWN KIN

New York, Nov. 29 (INS)—At the personal request of Dr. Adolf Lorenz, famed Viennese "bloodless surgeon," death was hastened for two members of his own family through "mercy killings," he revealed here today for the first time.

The two patients were his uncle and a daughter-in-law, both hopeless victims of cancer, the 85-year-old surgeon said in an exclusive interview.

"In my own family there were two mercy killings," he disclosed, "and in each instance the physicians acted at my request."

The two were not put to death immediately, Dr. Lorenz explained, but actually, and intentionally, their lives were cut short by "lavish doses" of morphine, given them to relieve their pain.

'MERELY MERCY'

His kindly face framed like a patriarch's by silver hair, the surgeon expressed the conviction the physicians did "nothing else than administer mercy" to his kinfolk, for whom all hope had been abandoned and who were lying in torture.

He said he "could not understand the fuss" in this country about the merits of artificial painless death for incurables.

"Every physician is a mercy killer," he declared, "if he treats patients whose tortures can only be relieved by narcotics, then he would give them narcotics, which, in the long run, although unintentional, will shorten life."

Dr. Lorenz was outspoken, however, against "intentional mercy killings" by physicians acting on their own responsibility.

WOULD DEMAND DEATH

He would not hesitate to submit to "mercy killing" himself, if he were suffering from incurable cancer, Dr. Lorenz said emphatically.

"I would say to my son, 'Kill me!'" he declared.

His son is Dr. Albert Lorenz of Vienna, whose first wife, Elizabeth, was one of the two cancer victims 12 years ago.

The uncle, the older Dr. Lorenz said, was the 83-year-old Abbot Gregor of the St. Paul Monastery in Corinthia.

"My uncle made my education possible," the venerable surgeon said feelingly, "When he was suffering terribly from cancer of the bladder, and there was no cure, I wrote to his physician, 'Please don't spare morphine.' In the case of my daughter-in-law, nobody spared morphine either."

Bay State Mercy Death Probe Ended by Police

Worcester, Nov. 29 (AP)—Lieutenant Edward J. McCarthy of the state police said today he would report to District Attorney Hohan he had completed his investigation of the alleged "mercy slaying" in North Brookfield in 1887 and found no information which would warrant a grand jury investigation or a charge of murder.

The investigation was made after Dr. Myron A. Warriner of Bridgeport, Conn., said he committed a "mercy slaying" 48 years ago by giving an overdose of drugs to Adolphus Letourneau after part of his face had been shot away.

Lieutenant McCarthy interviewed relatives in North Brookfield and Dr. Warriner in Bridgeport. He said Dr. Warriner was a bit hazy on some of the details.

The case has been closed.

4 Escape Death When Crane Falls

Worcester, Nov. 29—Four men narrowly escaped death today in the yard of the Crompton and Knowles Loom Works when a 10-ton traveling crane fell 30 feet, carrying three of the men with it.

Oren Cross, 39, and Albert Lovely, 48, both of Worcester, suffered two broken ankles each. John Perry, 31, of Worcester, sustained injuries to his left hip.

In its crash, one tip of the crane struck George Roohen, 32, of Worcester. He suffered a lacerated scalp.

SUICIDE'S 2 CRASHES

Injured Man Goes Under Knife

George R. MacCully, 23, of Lambert street, Medford, who killed himself yesterday after injuring a man in an automobile crash, had been involved in a second accident near Boston police headquarters, police said today.

After injuring Joseph Salemme, 42, of Otis street, East Cambridge, in South Medford, MacCully reported the accident and then drove into Boston.

At 2:30 a. m., an hour after the Medford accident, his car was in collision with an automobile driven by Willis E. Buswell of Revere street, Revere, at Berkeley street and Columbus avenue.

Neither car was damaged. MacCully arrived at home between 5 and 6 a. m. He later called the Lawrence Memorial Hospital and learned that Salemme's condition was serious. MacCully then went to the woods, on the edge of the Malden Hospital grounds, and shot himself.

He was a graduate of Medford High School, '30, and had been active in athletics. His driver's license had twice been suspended. He was employed as a driver for a Malden concern.

A brain operation was performed on Salemme late last night to relieve pressure from a skull fracture. Salemme was changing a tire in Harvard street, South Medford, when the accident occurred.

MacCully's car ran into the parked machine.

Plunge Is Mystery To Harvard Youth

Slowly recovering from injuries suffered October 27, when he plunged four stories down a ventilator shaft in Matthews Hall, freshman dormitory, William B. Schalick, Harvard '39, declared in Boston City Hospital today he had absolutely no recollection of what happened. He regained consciousness only about a week ago and does not remember anything for three days before the fall, he said.

Schalick, whose home is in New York, is under the care of Dr. Donald Munroe, brain specialist. He suffered a severe concussion, a shoulder dislocation and compound fracture of one arm.

Kirk Lauds State Policeman Hero

Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk today commended State Patrolman Hollis C. BRITONS HOPE FOR U. S. DEBT SETTLEMENT

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.)

London, Nov. 28—The British government has the support of the country today in continuing to withhold war debt payments to the United States, but there is dissatisfaction with the situation and Britons hope a settlement can be reached.

Unanimously accepted is the government policy that Britain cannot pay America, since Britain is not receiving payments from her debtors.

At the same time there is rejection of the idea that Britain can be regarded as a defaulter. Britone proudly insist they always honor obligations.

A typical summary of British opinion came from the American-born Gordon Selfridge. He said:

"NOT REPUDIATION"

"The British attitude is not repudiation, but rather inability to find a practical way of repaying. Some Americans fail to realize that British debts represent goods and services, and that they can only be satisfied by United States willingness to admit enormous quantities of manufactured goods and raw materials, with their consequent influences on internal trade and employment."

Valentine McEntee, one of the leading Labor members of Parliament, stated:

"I think all debt payments should be cancelled in the interests of all nations concerned. No country in the world will benefit until all war debts are cancelled."

Beverley Baxter, newly elected Conservative member of Parliament, said:

"American debt settlement cannot be left in its present indeterminate form. When the American government is ready for a fair readjustment, both as to amount and method of payment, Britain will meet her obligation."

Baron Runciman, 88-year-old father of Sir Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, said:

"The British government always honors its undertakings, financial and otherwise."

"PAYMENT IN KIND"

A suggestion that a payment in kind might solve the problem comes from David Low, Lord Beaverbrook's $50,000 a year cartoonist and political contender, who has made many leading statesmen shake in their boots. He expressed this opinion:

"I am not convinced as to the morality or benefit to anybody of further payment in gold of the war debts. But Britain and other European nations, to relieve their depressions, might try payment in goods and services."

Hopes for general debt settlement in future were voiced by two other widely known Britons, the Laborite peer, Lord Strabolgi, and Ralph D. Blumenfeld, chairman and former editor of the London Daily Express.

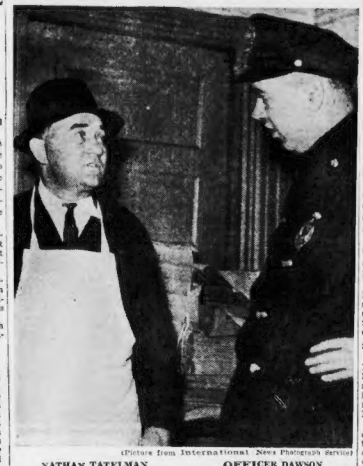
Tells of "Turk" Cash Robbery



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

NATHAN TATELMAN OFFICER DAWSON

Nathan Tatelman, Dorchester marketman, is telling how holdup men robbed him today of all his turkey-sales profits, between $400 and $500, confronting him with drawn guns soon after he opened his store in Woodrow avenue. Officer Walter Dawson of the Mattapan police station is hearing the story.

Bandits Get $400 In Dorchester

Nathan Tatelman, proprietor of a meat market in Woodrow avenue, Dorchester, was held up and robbed of between $400 and $500, the receipts of his holiday turkey sales, a few minutes after he opened the store today.

Two bandits, armed with a revolver, ordered Tatelman into a rear room, where they removed the cash from his trousers. They then locked him in a washroom.

He was warned to remain there for five minutes, but Tatelman freed himself and called police by telephone.

He was unable to determine if the bandits fled by foot or in a waiting automobile.

He described one of the intruders as about 21 years old, five feet, six inches tall, weighing 140 pounds and wearing a dark brown cap, zipper jacket and dark pants.

The other, about 35, weighing 165 pounds, five feet, 10 inches tall, was wearing a brown hat and dark overcoat.

Brockton Shooting Found Accident

Brockton, Nov. 29—Police today pronounced the shooting of Edward J. Easton, 18, of Oakland street, accidental, and announced that his hunting companion Thanksgiving Day afternoon, Donald Williams, 16, is not being held.

Easton and Williams, who lives in Cary road, were hunting in a woods near the latter's home when Williams' weapon, a small double-barreled shotgun using a light bird shot charge, went off unexpectedly and struck Easton in the chest. He was reported in dangerous condition in Brockton Hospital.

Decision to undertake the experimental projects was announced by Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau.

2 Auto Thieves Flee Gun Fire

Two auto thieves escaped through a blaze of shotgun fire in Cambridge today, with one of two machines they had stolen.

George H. Edgell, of Raymond street, arrived home at 3 a. m. to find his coupe and his beach wagon missing. He left his friend, William H. Chase, of Linden street, at the house while he went to the police station to make a report.

During his absence Chase saw the coupe driven near the house and ran out with a shotgun in an attempt to apprehend two youths who stepped out of it. They ran, he ordered them to halt and fired one shot when they did not. He does not know whether either was hit.

SISTER TELLS OF HILL GIRL'S KINDNESS

By MARGARET M. MARSHALL
International News Service Special Correspondent

Wise, Va., Nov. 29 (INS)—A bare-legged little girl with an Alice-in-Wonderland face—flying yellow locks to frame round, childish cheeks, blue eyes, a top-tilted nose and a pointed chin—smiled up at me, shyly, yet proudly.

"Edith," she confided, "gave me this doll for Christmas. And look at all the clothes I have made for it!"

Eleven-year-old Mary Kathrin Maxwell was talking of the big sister who lies in the county jail under sentence of 25 years in prison for the alleged deliberate murder of the father of the two girls.

STORY ON STAND

At her sister's trial, Mary Kathrin sat in the witness chair, her short, childish legs dangling six inches from the floor, and told in terrified childish accents of that night of tragedy in the lives of the Maxwell family.

She told of seeing her father drunk, of hearing his muffled threats against the absent Edith, of running to warn Edith against entering the very room in which we now sat, although it then contained Edith's bed covers.

In breathless, galloping words, she told of what she had seen and heard of that struggle unto death. The story, like that of Edith's mother, the worn and haggard Anne Maxwell, completly vindicated the older sister and daughter.

ALWAYS DOING GOOD

It seems dreadful enough that small Mary Kathrin should have seen and heard all the horrors she described in court. Having to tell about them to a curious, unfriendly audience was worse, and, if Edith Maxwell's lawyers achieve their ardently desired goal, the story must be told yet again at a second trial.

I hadn't the callous brutality to ask a little girl whose only concern should be with dolls and fairy books to repeat a page from real life's sinister blood and thunder.

So Mary Kathrin showed me big Sister Edith's cherished gift, the doll with a head as round and large and pinkly-tinted as a real baby's.

"Edith," she confided, "was always giving us things and doing things for us. We try to be brave and keep mother cheered up, but we can't forget things all the time."

Women Poor Auto Pilots Tests Show

Amherst, Nov. 29—Many women are going to be pretty mad about it, but automobile driving tests at Massachusetts State College returned women today as drivers far inferior to men.

Not before the average woman driver has had 25 years' experience behind a wheel can she steer as well as the average man driver with less experience, the exhaustive tests proved.

The results were announced by Dr. Harry R. DeSilva, professor of psychology at the college, who has tested 2500 persons of both sexes on a model steering device.

Men with no driving experience did better than women with no driving experience, he said, and men improved much more rapidly than did women.

Mather 'Sits Pat' As Oath Zero Nears

Dr. Kirtly Mather, Harvard geology professor and teachers' oath opponent, who has refused to take any form of oath save the veralon he devised himself, was "sitting tight" today at the university. Or, to quote him fully:

"I am simply sitting tight. I have heard nothing from any one; have had no ultimata and will have nothing to say further until some one else makes the first move."

He referred to the news stories detailing Attorney-General Paul A. Dever's ruling that the Mather form of oath could not be substituted for the form prescribed by the statute. The deadline for taking and filing the teachers' oath is November 30, tomorrow night.

At the office of James B. Conant, president of Harvard, it was said he was busy making up his annual president's report and would have nothing to say about the Mather case in any event.

Lost N. H. Farmer Hunted by Posses

Claremont, N. H., Nov. 29 (AP)—Three troops of Scouts and 125 members of the CCC company at Unity joined police today in a search for Hugh Durward, 82, retired farmer missing since Wednesday.

The elderly man went for his daily walk and failed to return.

ANTI-TRUST TEETH ASKED BY U. S.

Washington, Nov. 29 (US)—Noting a steadily increasing trend toward corporation mergers, the Federal Trade Commission has renewed its year-old plea for a tighter Clayton Anti-Trust law to ban "monopoly" mergers, now beyond its reach.

In its annual report, the commission also called on Congress to broaden the Trade Commission act to prohibit "unfair" business practices affecting consumers as well as those affecting business competition.

SETS UP NO BAR

The Clayton act now prohibits a corporation from acquiring a competitors' capital stock with intent to lessen competition, but sets up no bar against outright purchase of physical assets.

Urging again the broader ban it asked in 1934, the commission said:

"If the act is to accomplish the general purpose of preventing monopoly, it should prohibit acquisition not only through acquisition of stock unlawfully acquired, but by acquisition of physical property. The remedy should be as broad as the things prohibited."

The report disclosed the commission in 12 months began 37 inquiries into mergers, disposed of 20, and had seven pending at the year-end. Two complaints were referred to the Justice Department for possible prosecution.

EVIDENCE FOUND

In its chain store inquiry, the commission reported finding evidence that manufacturers made frequent special discounts to the chains "without definite relation to cost of selling."

To curb the practice, it asked the Clayton Act be amended to require manufacturers of all but perishable goods selling in interstate commerce immediately to report to it special discounts not published to the trade.

Seeking clearer jurisdiction over practices "unfair to the public though not necessarily unfair to a competitor," the report said:

"There are times when such a practice is so universal in an industry that the public is primarily injured, rather than individual competitors. In such cases, it is difficult, if not impossible to show injury to competitors, but the injury to the public is manifest."

Police, who are holding the Prudnik boy on a technical charge, quoted him as saying that he "covered" the victim, and pulled the trigger of a .22 calibre revolver, unaware that it was cocked.

COMPLETE TEXT OF ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH IN ATLANTA

DECLARES U. S. FINANCES NOW "IN BLACK"

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 29 (INS)—The complete text of President Roosevelt's homecoming address follows:

I am happy to be in Georgia. I am proud of Georgia.

Happy because of this moving reception which my friends, the senators and representatives in the congress from this state tendered me, and which you, the good people of the state, have responded to with such warmth and hospitality, happy because I meet again so many old friends and neighbors.

Proud because I see signs on every hand that the overwhelming majority of the people of this state are keeping pace with the millions of others throughout the nation who believe in progress, are willing to work for progress and are going to get progress.

Proud because I see clear signs of a revival of material prosperity in country and in city and especially because I sense a sweeping prosperity of the spirit that spells a greater help and a deeper happiness for our fellowmen.

Eleven years ago I came to live at Warm Springs for the first time. That was a period of great so-called prosperity. But I would not go back to the conditions of 1924, and I do not believe that you people would want to go back either.

"On Battleline"

Of that year and of the five years followed. I have a clear recollection which you can verify for yourself. In that orgy of "prosperity" a wild speculation was building speculative profits for the speculators and preparing the way for the public to be left "holding the bag."

In that orgy of "prosperity" banks, individually and by chains, were closing their doors at the expense of the depositors.

In that orgy of "prosperity" the farmers of the South had become involuntary speculators themselves, never certain whether they planted their cotton whether it would bring 25 cents or 15 cents or 5 cents.

In that orgy of "prosperity" the poorest sided with the richest in throwing their earnings and their savings into a cauldron of land and stock speculation.

In that orgy of "prosperity" slum conditions went unheeded, better education was forgotten, usurious interest charges mounted, child labor continued, starvation wages were paid and the rule instead of the exception, mammon ruled America.

Those are the years to remember—those fools' paradise years before the crash came.

Too much do we have on the years that followed, when from 1929 to 1933 this nation slipped spirally downward—ever downward—to the inevitable point when the mechanics of civilizations came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933.

On Upward Path

You and I need not rehearse the four years of disaster and gloom. We know the simple fact that at the end of those years America acted before it was too late, that we turned about and by a supreme, welnigh unanimous national effort, started on the upward path again.

I have reason to remember the past two and a half years that have gone by so quickly, reason to remember the fine spirit of the average American citizen which made my task lighter.

Memory is short, but yours is not too short to recollect those great meetings of the representatives of the farmers, regionally, and in Washington in the spring and summer of 1933, when they agreed overwhelmingly that unfairly low prices for farm crops could never be raised to and maintained at a reasonable level until and unless the government of the United States acted to help them to reduce the tremendous carry-overs and surpluses which threatened us and the whole world.

You and I can well remember the overwhelming demand that the national government come to the rescue of the home owners and the farm owners of the nation who were losing the roofs over their heads through inflated valuations and exhorbitant rates of interest.

You and I still recollect the need for and the successful attainment of a banking policy which not only opened the closed banks, but guaranteed the deposits of the depositors of the nation.

You and I have not forgotten the enthusiastic support that succeeded in ending the labor of children in mills and factories, in seeking a fairer wage level for those on starvation pay and in giving to the workers hope for the right collectively to bargain with their employers.

You and I will not forget the long struggle to put an end to the indiscriminate distribution of "fly-by-night" securities, and to provide fair regulations of the stock exchanges and of the great interstate public utility companies of our country.

You and I—yes, every individual and every family in the land—are being brought close to that supreme achievement of the present Congress—the social security law which, in days to come, will provide the aged against distressing want, will set up a national system of insurance for the unemployed and will extend well-merited care to sick and crippled children.

Orgy of "Prosperity"

You and I are enlisted today in a great crusade in every part of the land to co-operate with nature and not to fight her, to stop destructive floods, to prevent dust storms and the washing away of our precious soils, to grow trees, to give thousands of farm families a chance to live and to seek to provide more and better food for the city dwellers of the nation.

In this connection it is, I think, of interest to point out that national surveys prove that the average of our citizenship lives today on what would be called by the medical fraternity a third-class diet.

If the country lived on a second-class diet, we would need to put many more acres than we use today back into the production of foodstuffs for domestic consumption.

If the nation lived on a first-class diet, we would have to put more acres than we have ever cultivated into the production of an additional supply of things for Americans to eat.

Why, speaking in broad terms in following up this particular illustration, are we living on a third-class diet?

For the very simple reason that the masses of the American people have not got the purchasing power to eat more and better food.

Farm Income Rise

I mentioned a few weeks ago that farm income in the United States has risen since 1932 a total of nearly three billions. That is because wheat is selling at better than 90 cents, instead of 32 cents; corn at 50 cents, instead of 12 cents; cotton at 12 cents, instead of 4½ cents, and other crops in proportion.

I wonder what cotton would be selling at today, if during those past three years we had continued to produce 15 or 16 or 17 million bales each year, added to our own surplus, adding to the world surplus and driving the cotton farmers of the South into bankruptcy and starvation.

The additional three billions of farm income has meant the rebirth of city business, the reopening of closed factories, the doubling of automobile production, the improvement of transportation and the giving of new employment to millions of people.

That brings us squarely face to face with the fact of the continued employment of many million persons of whom approximately three and a half million are employables in need of relief.

When some of the people of a great and wealthy country are suffering from starvation an honest government has no choice.

At first, realizing that we were not doing a perfect thing, but that we were doing a necessary saving and human thing, we appropriated money for direct relief.

That was necessary to ward off actual starvation.

But as quickly as possible we turned to the job of providing actual work for those in need.

I can realize that gentlemen in well-warmed and well-stocked clubs will discourse on the expense of government and the suffering that they are going through because the government is spending money for work relief.

"On Battleline"

I wish I could take some of these men out on the battleline of human necessity and show them the facts that we in the government are facing.

If these more fortunate Americans will come with me I will not only show them the necessity for the expenditures of this government, but I will show them, as well, the definite and beneficial results we have attained with the dollars we have spent.

Some of these gentlemen tell me that a dole would be more economical than work relief.

That is true.

But the men who tell me that have, unfortunately, too little contact with the true American to realize that in this business of relief we are dealing with proudly self-respecting Americans to whom a mere dole outrages every instinct of individual independence.

Most Americans want to give something for what they get. That something, in this case honest work, is the saving barrier between them and moral disintegration. We propose to build that barrier high.

3,125,000 at Work

Last April I stated what I have held to consistently ever since—that it was the hope of the administration that by some time in November of this year we would substantially end the dole and offer in place of it employment to by far the greater part of the three and a half million employable persons we estimated to be on the relief rolls in the United States.

Week after week since then some individuals and some groups, careless of the truth and regardless of scruple, have sought to make the American people believe that this program was a hopeless failure and that it could not possibly succeed.

Today is the 29th day of November. It is now to me a certain satisfaction to be able to inform you, and through you the nation, that on Wednesday, two days ago, there were 3,125,000 persons at work on various useful projects throughout the nation.

The small remaining number have received orders to report to work on projects already under way or ready to be started.

This result, I believe you will agree with me, constitutes a substantial and successful national achievement.

Aside from the tremendous increase in morale through substituting work for dole, there is the practical side of permanent material benefit.

Within sight of us today stands a tribute to useful work under government supervision—the first slum clearance and low-rent housing project.

Here, at the request of the citizens of Atlanta, we have cleaned out nine square blocks of antiquated, squalid dwellings, for years a detriment to this community.

Today those hopeless old houses are gone and in their place we see the bright, cheerful buildings of the Techwood Housing Project.

Within a very short time people who never before could get a decent roof over their heads will live here in reasonable comfort and healthful, worthwhile surroundings; others will find homes in Atlanta's second slum clearance, the University project; and still others will find similar opportunity in nearly all of the older, overcrowded cities of the United States.

"Worthwhile"

I take it that it has been equally worthwhile to the nation to give jobs to the unemployed in the construction of a vast network of highways, including thousands of miles of farm to market roads, in repairing great numbers of schools and building hundreds of new ones in city and country, in helping cities to put in sewers and sewage disposal plants and water works, in constructing cold storage warehouses and county recreational buildings, in creating aviation fields, in giving a million boys a chance to go to CCC camps and to work on forestry and on soil erosion prevention, in controlling malaria, in pushing health projects, in giving white collar workers into jobs of permanent usefulness to their communities and in giving youth an opportunity for better education

Into the ears of many of you have been dinned the cry that your government is piling up an unconscionable and back-breaking debt.

"Maximum Debt"

Let me tell you a simple story: In the spring of 1933 many of the great bankers of the United States flocked to Washington.

They were there to get the help of their government in the saving of their banks from insolvency.

To them I pointed out, in all fairness, the simple fact that the government would be compelled to go heavily into debt for a few years to come, in order to save banks and insurance companies and mortgage companies, and railroads, and to take care of millions of people who were on the verge of starvation.

Every one of these gentlemen expressed the firm conviction that it was all well worth the price and that they heartily approved.

In order to get their further judgment, however, I asked them what they thought the maximum national debt of the United States Government would rise to without serious danger to the national credit.

Their answers, remember this was in the spring of 1933, were that the country could safely stand a national debt of between 55 and 70 billion dollars.

I told them that a rise in the national debt to any such figure was, in my judgment, wholly unnecessary, and that even if they, the bankers, were willing I could not and would not go along with them. I told them then that only a moderate increase in the debt for the next few years seemed likely and justified.

That objective holds good today; but remember that at that time many bankers and big business men would have been willing to put the country far deeper into debt than I shall ever let it go.

If the bankers thought the country would stand a debt of 55 to 70 billion dollars in 1933, with values as they were then, I wonder what they would say the country could stand today, in the light of an enormous increase of values of property of all kinds along the line since 1933.

Your government says to you: "You cannot borrow your way out of debt; but you can invest your way into a sounder future."

As a matter of actual fact, of course, the gross national debt under the last administration rose from a little over seventeen billions to twenty-one billions.

The day I came into office I found that the national treasury contained only $158,000,000, or, at the rate of previously authorized expenditures, enough to last the treasury less than a month.

Since March 4, 1933, the national debt has risen from 21 billions to 29½ billions, but it must also be remembered that today, including in this figure is nearly 1½ billions of working balance in the treasury and nearly 4½ billion dollars of recoverable assets which the government will get back over a period of years, and which will be used for the retirement of debt.

Revenues Gaining

As things stand today, and in the light of a definite and continuing economic improvement, we have passed the peak of appropriations; revenues without the imposition of new taxes are increasing, and we can look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit.

The credit of the government is today higher than that of any other great nation in the world, in spite of attacks on that credit made by those few individuals and organizations which seek to dictate to the administration and to the Congress how to run the national Treasury and how to let the needy starve.

In the spring of 1933, if you and I had made a national balance sheet, we would have found that if we had added up the values of all of the property of every kind in the United States by American citizens, the total of those values, which we would call assets, would have been exceeded by the figure representing the total of all the debt owed by the people of the United States.

In other words, at that time our national balance sheet, the wealth versus the debts of the American public, showed that we were in the red.

Today, less than three years later, it is a fact that the total of all the debts in the United States is lower than it was then.

"In the Black"

Whereas on the other side of the picture, you and I know that the values of property of all kinds—farms, homes, automobiles, securities and every other kind of property, have increased so greatly since 1933 that today we are once more in the black. We were insolvent; today we are solvent.

In this fact most of us find a deep satisfaction. But recovery means something more than getting the country back into the black.

You and I do not want just to go back to the past.

We want to face the future in the belief that human beings can enjoy more of the good things of life, under better conditions, than human being ever enjoyed in the past.

American life has improved in these two years and a half, and if I have anything to do with it it is going to improve more in the days to come.

The word "progress" is a better word than "recovery," for it means not only a sound business and a sound agriculture from the material point of view, but it means, with equal importance, a sound improvement in American life as a result of continuing and forceful effort on the part of our people, and through them, on the part of the government.

I am certain that that is your purpose, and that is why I continue my confidence, my faith in the people of America.

Dull Spot

Atlanta, Nov. 29 (AP)—The State Capitol was one of the few buildings here having no decorations for the celebration of Roosevelt day.

M. G. Turner, custodian, explained the buildings and grounds division had no money appropriated to it for decorations and no special allocation was made for this occasion.

It had been expected that Governor Talmadge would order the Capitol offices closed, but this was not done.

"Anybody who wants to go to the speaking will go anyhow," Talmadge was quoted as saying.

Youth Arrested In Stolen Car

Theodore Donahowski, 20, of Summer street, Hyde Park, was arrested early today at Massachusetts avenue and Huntington avenue, Back Bay, in an auto owned by Miss Constance Tyler, of Buckminster road, Brookline.

The car was reported stolen on Milk street, last September.

In it were two radios, which Donanowski told the police he stole out of two machines parked in the Back Bay. He faced central court today charged with larceny of the machine and radios.

ROOSEVELT DECLARES U. S. FINANCES NOW IN BLACK

"you and I" remember conditions before the New Deal and contrasted them with today.

Emphasizing the national debt problem, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Into the ears of many of you have been dinned the cry that your government is piling up an unconscionable and backbreaking debt."

Then he told for the first time that in a talk with many of the great bankers" who "flocked to Washington" in the crisis of 1933.

Bankers Set Debt

"I asked them what they thought the maximum national debt of the United States could rise to without serious danger to the national credit," he said.

"Their answers, remember this was in the spring of 1933, were that the country could safely stand a national debt of between 55 and 70 billion dollars."

He said he replied he had no intention, then or now, of permitting such a debt.

"I told them then that only a moderate increase in the debt for the next few years seemed likely and justified. That objective holds good today."

The gross national debt under the Hoover administration, he said, rose from a little over 17 billion dollars to 21 billions. Since he took office on March 4, 1933, he added, the national debt has risen from 21 billions to 29¼ billions.

Included in the figure, he explained, is nearly 1½ billion dollars of working balance in the treasury and nearly 4½ billions of recoverable assets which he said the government would get back over period of years.

"The credit of the government is today higher than that of any other great nation in the world, in spite of attacks on that credit made by those few individuals and organizations which seek to dictate to the administration and to the Congress how to run the national treasury and how to let the needy starve."

There was no specific promise to end relief or to ban new taxes, but the President said:

"I see clear signs of a revival of material prosperity in country and in city" and "sense a swelling prosperity of the spirit that spells a greater help and a deeper happiness for our fellow men."

Nation in "Black"

Mentioning that "gentlemen in well warmed and well stocked clubs will discourse on the expenses of government and the suffering that they are going through" because of government spending, he remarked:

"I wish I could take some of these men out on the battle line of human necessity and show them the facts that we in the government are facing."

Referring to the federal employment, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Aside from the tremendous increase in morale through substituting work for a dole, there is the practical side of permanent material benefit."

He pointed to a vast slum clearance project within sight of the oval stadium of Georgia Tech as one of the "useful" government undertakings and referred to the numerous road and school building constructions and to the Civilian Conservation Corps among the many federal undertakings in making jobs.

Stating the country was again "in the black" on the ledger sheet, Mr. Roosevelt said this was true because in the last three years the total of all debts in the United States had become lower and the values of property higher to the extent that the latter had the margin.

Cotton Upturn

"American life has improved in these two years an do. bait," he concluded, "and if I have anything to do with it, it is going to improve more in the days to come."

Referring to increases in wheat from 32 cents to 99 cents a bushel in the last three years and of cotton from 4½ cents to 12 cents a pound, he continued:

"I wonder what cotton would be selling at today if during these past three years we had continued to produce fifteen or sixteen or seventeen million bales each year, adding to our own surplus, adding to the world surplus, and driving the cotton farmers of the south into bankruptcy and starvation?"

'You and I'

Atlanta, Nov. 29 (AP)—The expression, "You and I," was added to such platform Roosevelisms as "fellow citizens" and "my friends" in the Georgia homecoming address of the President today.

Mr. Roosevelt used "You and I" eight times in his prepared speech of about 2300 words.

Borah-Fish Parley Has 'Em Guessing

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The praise that Representative Fish (R) New York accorded Senator Borah of Idaho aroused speculation today as to what is in the political wind.

The two men, both mentioned as candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination, interrupted their Thanksgiving holiday to talk politics.

Afterward Fish praised Borah as a man who could draw more votes in New England, New York and Pennsylvania than any other prospect.

Borah himself declined to comment, telling reporters:

"I haven't anything to say now. I may have in a day or two."

The conference led some observers to believe the two men were bent on preventing the nomination of an old guard Republican next year.

HOOVER QUOTED AGAINST LAVAL

Paris, Nov. 29 (AP)—Advocates of devaluation attacked Premier Laval's gold standard policy today as harmful to France and as involving the danger of a panic.

Paul Reynaud, in the Chamber of Deputies, urged a "cool" and deliberate depreciation of money.

"We are now on the way toward greater peril," he declared, apparently meaning he feared devaluation if it should come in the midst of a panic.

Reynaud quoted the former American president, Herbert Hoover, as blaming the United States' gold losses before devaluation on foreign monetary maneuvers, in support of his contention.

Reynaud asserted gold flowed outward when money was overvaluated and flowed inward when it was devaluated. He cited the United States, England and Belgium, where he said gold returned after depreciation of their currencies.

CHICOPEE MAN OFF BALLOT

Although George Simonich, Chicopee alderman, resigned in order to run for mayor, he is ineligible under the city charter, Judge Henry T. Lummus of the Supreme Court ruled today.

Judge Lummus said that the Chicopee charter states that no alderman can hold any other office "during the term for which he was elected."

He pointed out that although Simonich resigned, the term for which he was elected alderman does not expire until January, 1937.

The Chicopee ballot commission had ruled that Simonich could be a candidate in the election next Tuesday.

Judge Lummus issued a writ of certiorari quashing the ballot commission's ruling and a writ of mandamus ordering City Clerk Charles P. LaRiviere to leave Simonich off the ballot.

Zara DuPont Plans Peace Campaign

Miss Zara duPont, elderly first cousin of the munition-making duPonts of Wilmington, Del., will campaign for peace from public platforms in Cambridge, it was learned today.

She has obtained permission from Mayor Richard M. Russell to set up a stand in Harvard square and later in other squares.

Miss duPont will solicit signatures for the petition circulated by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

She blames the older generation for bringing the world to the verge of another war which the younger generation would be called upon to take part in.

Moose Hunters Bag 25 in Day in Maine

Augusta, Me., Nov. 29 (AP)—A steady rain failed to dampen the ardor of moose hunters today.

A three-day season on moose, the sole open season on such game in the country this year, ends tomorrow in the three counties in which the ban was lifted—Knox, Waldo and Lincoln.

At the end of the first day, wardens estimated not more than 25 moose slain, as against 50 in six days in the last open season, 1929.

1000 Bales Pulp Adrift Off Coast

The British steamer Markland radioed the Boston hydrographic office today that while 150 miles east of Boston Lightship she passed through more than 1000 bundles of baled pulpwood on Thanksgiving Day.

Shipping men here said they had not heard of any missing pulpwood but declared their belief that it probably was swept off the deck of some vessel during a storm.

Railway Tunnel Balks Post's Plane

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The late Wiley Post's globe-circling airplane "Winnie Mae" found a passage it could not navigate on its last trip.

En route to a final landing in the Smithsonian Institution here aboard a freight car, the "Winnie Mae" stuck at the entrance of a tunnel near Baltimore. Institution officials were advised the ship and car would be rerouted to Washington through West Virginia.

Market Man Suicide

Woonsocket, R. I., Nov. 29—Aram Lamoureux, 55, proprietor of a fish market here, was dead today in what police say was a suicide. He was found with his throat slashed. He was a native of Fall River, Mass.

U. S. Registering Munitions Makers

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—All manufacturers, importers and exporters of arms and ammunitions were required today to be registered with the national munitions control board.

This requirement became effective under an executive order issued September 35 by President Roosevelt, who acted in conformance with the neutrality law.

ROOSEVELT NOT RUN?

G. O. P. Says 'He Can't Take It'

Detroit, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Detroit News says Melvin C. Eaton, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in New York, predicted in an interview today that President Roosevelt would not be a candidate for renomination.

"I know that boy and I know he can't take it," to News quoted Eaton as saying. "He can't face the opposition of the conservative Democrats.

"He is just like Lehman (Governor Lehman of New York). Lehman can't take it, either, and I doubt if he will be a candidate for re-election next year."

Eaton, a manufacturer of pharmaceutical products, said the New York Republican delegation will go to the party's national convention uninstructed, and probably will swing its strength to a "western candidate."

The delegation will not support Senator William E. Borah of Idaho for the nomination, the News said Eaton declared. And he predicted that former President Hoover probably will not run.

Eaton was quoted as saying:

"I am satisfied we could carry New York against Roosevelt with a western candidate.

"My idea of what the country needs is a big business man in the White House. The people have awakened to the fact that it is time to get these grammar school boys out of Washington. It wouldn't surprise me if an unknown popped up and got the nomination."

CHINA PROTESTS JAPAN'S 'PLOT' ON AUTONOMY

Nanking, Nov. 29 (INS)—Charging violation of her sovereignty, China today formally protested to Japan against recent military and political activities in northern provinces.

Two notes were handed to Consul-General Sumu of Japan, the first flatly declaring that the northern autonomy movement "was engineered by disgruntled elements acting in connivance with Japanese militarists."

It asked Japan to curb the activities of her army chiefs, and stressed China's desire to settle the present difficulties through diplomatic channels, and not by force.

The second note asked for Japanese guarantee that occupation of railway stations, such as occurred Wednesday in Fengtai and Changyimen, will not occur again.

Britain Demands Japanese Explain

London, Nov. 29 (INS)—The British government instructed its embassy in Tokio today to demand an explanation concerning Japan's recent actions in north China.

Insisting upon being informed of the meaning and purpose of events in the Far East, Britain has made it clear that much of her future action and policy will depend upon Japan's reply.

British diplomatic circles are admittedly greatly concerned over Japan's obvious intentions of grabbing an important slice of China, and Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, adviser to the British treasury, has already warned that detachment of the north China provinces would be economically and financially disastrous to China.

0 P.C. of Radio Ads' Held False

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission says about 10 per cent of the radio advertising continuities it has studied have been found "possibly false and misleading."

The commission, which has power to stop misleading advertising, said in its annual report to Congress that of 376,539 continuities analyzed, 38,873 were questioned. They will be studied further.

Of 126 advertisements in magazines, 284 were set aside for special consideration. No statistics on newspaper advertising were given.

OFFICER TRASK — JOAN BUTOCCHI — OFFICER MURPHY — PAUL BUTOCCHI

Santa Claus is going to be pretty busy this year so Patrolmen Walter W. Trask and Joseph C. Murphy of Station 9 decided to lend a helping hand. They are repairing old toys while Joan Butocchi, aged five, and brother, Paul, aged three, give valuable suggestions. They live at Forest street, Roxbury. Joan is pretty interested in that little drummer boy. And Paul is looking longingly at that doll. Say, Mr. Cameraman, are you sure you posed this picture just right?

CHAPTER 62

They looked alive in their movements and resembled a school of gigantic fish forcing their way down the river.

The pressure behind the logs was tremendous and it was hard to imagine how such a mass could be dealt with at Archangel.

An old man, who had worked in the timber industry all his life, sat on the bank of the river and looked at the logs sadly.

"Another week and it will be in the White Sea. How do they figure they can stop this onslaught?

"They've overdone it again and have shoved all the logs into the water at the same time. It takes imagination!

"So much valuable timber thrown away, so much work wasted in the cutting of it! Oh, the power wielded by fools!"

The logs drove by in an unending mass all day and all night. On the second morning disquieting reports were received of strong rains in the regions of the two most important log rivers, the Syssla and the Vym.

It was reported that a much greater number of logs had been shoved into the rivers than the plan provided.

The originators of the idea of driving the loose logs were triumphant.

But the old man on the bank of the river quietly chuckled.

A week passed and suddenly the catastrophe came. An urgent telegram from Archangel reported that the main boom had given way and that the logs were carried into the ocean.

It was ordered that the entire population be again mobilized to stop the floating logs.

It was easier to send the tales. A large number of logs was saved, but in comparison with the main mass it was a drop in the ocean.

On the following day we resumed the work; the number of logs in the third day we were back at the office, but the mobilized population continued working.

The attempt to drive the logs without tying them into rafts was a total failure.

More than a million logs had gone out into the ocean!

However, the driving continued. Thousands and thousands of logs passed Solvychegodsk daily, floating down the river in unending succession.

The damaged booms at Archangel were hastily repaired, the Communist in charge was replaced by another, and his technical adviser, an engineer, was arrested and thrown into jail.

Toward the end of the log-driving operations we were again sent to the river, for the water level had fallen to such an extent that many logs remained on the banks and had to be shoved back into the water.

Together with the mobilized population we were kept busy at this for another three days.

Huge Waste

On June 30 the log-driving operations were officially declared completed and navigation was reopened.

A narrow ribbon of logs in the middle of the river was all that was left, but tugs again made their appearance, dragging barges with supplies for the Komi territory and with "voluntary colonists."

Then came the reports of the results. About 40 per cent of all the logs had been lost in the ocean.

About this time a telegram was received from Moscow containing important instructions. The Northern penal camps, transferred to the village of Ust-Vym, in the Komi territory, were to be called the Ust-Vym Corrective Penitentiary Camp.

The new camp was charged with finishing the highway construction between Ust-Sysolsk and Ukhta and with keeping the half-finished Sysktyvkar-Penug railroad line in repair.

A liquidation commission was to remain in Solvychegodsk.

A new commander arrived and took charge. It was the chekist Pinky-Dymott from the Caucasus, who had been caught in some transgression, but had been pardoned and made commander of the new camp.

He remained in Solvychegodsk only half a day, but visited all the departments of the camp, rushing from one to the other on horseback, cancelling old orders and issuing new ones.

In the evening he took the river boat for Kotlas, examined the warehouses, gave some new instructions and left for Moscow.

Most of his orders were impracticable, but he had descended upon us like a tornado and brought some life into the monotony of our daily existence.

In another week he was back from Moscow with an order to complete without fail the construction of the highway before winter.

Special speed-shifts of prisoners were to be put to work and the highway to to be turned over to the inspection committee by November 7.

Two days later we left by steamer for our new destination. We passed the remainder of the floating logs. They came down loose and in rafts, some rafts of 600 logs and some enormous ones of 8000 to 10,000.

The crews consisted of men and women apparently in the best of spirits. They built fires and cooked their food right there on the rafts.

Like confirmed nudists they played and swam, dived and climbed back on the floats; the lads pursued the lasses, grabbed them and tumbled into the water with shouts and laughter.

Toward evening our steamer stopped to give way to a caravan of rafts. Bathers swam in the narrow space between the rafts and the steamer. The play and shouting on the rafts continued.

The lads were getting drunk, and often the girls screamed with genuine fright.

MAN ARRESTED IN GIRL KIDNAP

Alleged to be the kidnaper of Norma Civile, 17, of Henchman street, North End, a man was arrested today by authorities in Westport, Ct., according to word received by Boston police.

The captive gave an address in North Troy, N. Y., according to the girl, during her 24-hour battle with the kidnaper during a drive to Rhode Island with him, as he revealed that he was from Troy.

The same stranger, claiming to be a contractor, enticed the girl into a stolen car in Boston, she told police, on the promise of a job. Then he started with her for New York, where he said the girl would work.

Miss Civile told her parents and police that she begged and pleaded with the man on three different occasions not to molest her when he tried to force his attentions on her during the long ride.

Finally, she said, the auto broke down in Westerly, R. I., and the man hailed a passing truck. The truck, from Arkansas, was driven through to Boston, so Miss Civile accepted the ride.

Body of Suspect's Wife Found

Twin Falls, Idaho, Nov. 29 (AP)—The body of Mildred Hook of Tacoma, Wash., was found near here today.

The body of the divorced wife of Douglas Van Vlack, held here on a charge of the murder of Fontaine Cooper, State highway patrolman, was found about 10 miles southwest of here.

Posses of citizens and officers had combed this vicinity for her since Van Vlack was arrested near here last Tuesday, after the patrolman was shot and killed and Deputy Sheriff Henry Givens was wounded when they accosted the couple on the highway.

Van Vlack steadfastly denied harming the girl he is alleged to have abducted from a tacoma street house last Saturday. Officers quoted him as saying he left him Monday after the shooting.

Lieutenant Foley Given Air Funeral

Salem, Nov. 29—Twelve planes dipped in last salutes during a brief funeral services today for Lieutenant William L. Foley, formerly of Miami, pioneer coast guard aviator and commander of the Salem coast guard air station.

The body of the lieutenant, who died Tuesday of septic poisoning, was placed in the coast guard plane Altair to go to Arlington, Va. Here full military honors will be accorded in burial services at the national cemetery tomorrow.

Alimony Prisoner Is Still Short $30

Unchanged today was the status of Frederick Ludue, Lawrence cutlery expert, who on Monday chose Salem jail in preference to liberty obtainable by paying $60 back alimony.

Ludue changed his mind Tuesday and sought freedom, but he still has only $30 of the necessary $60 and doesn't know where the other half—the better half—is coming from.

GOODWIN FLAYS AUTO 'MENACE'

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin today branded Charles L. Calish of Abbottsford street, Roxbury, as "a menace on the highway," and extended an original 15-day suspension of Calish's license to two months.

"After the license of Calish was taken for 15 days for cutting in in front of a truck on the Salem turnpike," Goodwin declared, "it developed another suspension was then going through the office for two speeding convictions, together with a complaint made by the Arlington police for speeding. It also developed that Calish's license had been taken away on four different occasions for speeding.

"I have decided, therefore, that instead of giving back Calish's license in 15 days, he isn't going to get it back for two months. Consider him a menace on the highway and it is about time to take him off for a good long rest."

Fumes Kill Hubby, Bride Near Death

Woonsocket, R. I., Nov. 29—Mrs. Evelyn Pare Pincince, 20, bride of two months, fought for life in Woonsocket Hospital today, unaware that carbon monoxide fumes which caused her desperate illness had killed her husband.

Noel Pincince, 22, died in an adjoining room in the hospital yesterday.

They were overcome in their Park avenue apartment by fumes from a burner. Before becoming unconscious they collapsed several times and treated themselves for indigestion.

Police battered down the door after Pincince's mother had failed to gain entrance.

Two Accused in $25,000 Holdup

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Louis Oleten, 35, of Brooklyn, and Jack Silva, 34, of New York, were held on robbery charges after questioning in police lineup today about a $25,000 holdup here last summer.

Police said Silva was wanted also by police in Albany, N. Y., and Hartford, Ct., for robbery.

"Old Crow" Flies to No Fires

I want to sit up on a horse-cart red
Speak rough to the horses and say "Go ahead"
—O For the Life of a Fireman—

A fire-fan, somewhat the worse for a hard day of giving thanks, sounded the tocsin—in fact three tocsins—of alarm this morning in Roxbury and teetered off in the rain tittering up his sleeve.

Within 20 minutes the mysterious young man pulled three alarm boxes to which fire apparatus responded. He is believed to have been "intoxi-cated."

The first false alarm came in from Box 3177 at Blue Hill and Lawrence avenues at 3:30 a. m.

In exactly six minutes and three blocks—as the (Old) Crow flies, he reached Box 3171 at Howard and Cunningham streets.

Fourteen minutes later—or 3:50 E. S. T.—"Little Lord False-Alarm" made his third "pull."

Classmates Mourn Martin Boy

With classmates from the fifth grade of the Agassiz school present, funeral services for Francis J. Martin, 11, of Bower terrace, Jamaica Plain, whose sudden death is still a mystery to the authorities, were held today in St. Thomas Aquinas Church.

A requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Edward J. Riley. Several hundred school-children, friends and relatives filled the church.

Following the services, the boy's body started on a trip to its final resting place in a cemetery in Bangor, Maine. His mother, Mrs. Ethel Dorothy Martin, is a native of Bangor.

Stricken with a strange malady, the lad died seven and a half hours after he became ill.

Monday evening, Francis went to bed in apparently good health. In the early morning hours, his cries aroused his mother.

She sped to the home of Dr. F. W. Deering, who gave her medicine for the boy. The mother administered the medicine under the doctor's directions before his arrival. Later the doctor ordered Francis removed to the hospital, where he died three hours after he was admitted.

Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, performed an autopsy.

RELIEF BY U. S. NEARS END

Washington, Nov. 29 (INS)—Federal direct relief, which has cost $2,975,932,284 since May, 1933, is scheduled to end tomorrow — at least until Congress meets in January.

Harry L. Hopkins, who has directed the allotments to states of this vast sum as FERA administrator, insists that direct federal relief will end as of December 1.

But the $4,000,000,000 work relief program, launched last April when Congress passed the record peacetime appropriation, has failed, as far as the latest figures available show, to provide jobs for all of the 3,500,000 employable heads of families on the relief rolls.

The program was 1,132,758 jobs shy of the goal on November 15, when the last employment figures were announced by WPA.

SUNDAY LAUGH SHOW TO AID BASKET FUND

"Three Men On a Horse," the prize-winning, laugh-stride which is playing at the Plymouth Theatre will be seen Sunday evening in a special performance for the benefit of the 23rd Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser. All proceeds go to the fund.

In one performance of Alex Yokel's hilarious production 47 consecutive laughs were clocked. Through the generosity of Yokel, and the Plymouth Theatre management, many hundreds of dollars will derive from the sale of tickets for Sunday's evening performance. A supply is still available at the theatre, Macy's Drug Store on Tremont street and The Mayfair.

On a blue-ruled piece of paper torn from a school tablet one of the first contribution to this year's Christmas Basket Fund from a Boston schoolboy rings the bell with even this hard-boiled Basket Fund Editor.

"Dear Mr. Christmas Basket Editor:

"I am sending you all this money which is a dolar and 52 cents to by food for the poor boys and girls for Xmas. We are going to have a big meal and enyway my father is working at a job now and we dont need enybasket like you send us that Christmas or else we would not have had anything my mother said.

"I am in the 3 grade now. I was only in the 1 grade last year. I was going to by a Christmas present for my mother with this dolar and 52 cts which I saved only when I asked her what I should by she said will you give it to the american Xmas basket man so he can by food with it for others because I know what that means and it would make your mother the happyest present. So here is this dollar 52 cts I counted six times and just say from my mother not from me because I was going to by her a Xmas present with the dolar and 52 cents."

TYPICAL APPEAL

Here, too, is another typical appeal among the hundreds that have been coming to the Christmas Basket Fund headquarters, 294 Devonshire street, just off Summer street, since this year's drive began.

CASE NO. 3

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in the hope that you will help us out this year.

There are five of us in the family. My mother and father are dead. My oldest sister, who was 25 years old, was taking care of us until she died three years ago, since then I have been doing my best to make ends meet, but it has been hard.

My two brothers who are nine and 13 years old are still going to school, my two sisters have left school but cannot find any kind of work. What aid we receive from the Welfare, leaves us very little for food, I just manage to keep my two brothers in school, as they have very little to wear. If you would investigate my case I am sure you will help us out, as I cannot write a letter very well. I will close hoping you will do something for us, to make it a real Christmas.

HOW TO HELP

This family lives in South Boston. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor at Liberty 4000.

Sunday's the Big Day

Come on, goodfellows! Let's make the special performance of "Three Men on a Horse," Sunday night, at the Plymouth, a SELLOUT. You'll be giving yourself a treat, and at the same time helping a worthy cause—The Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund. Lovely and talented Betty Field and other members of the cast are donating their services, and we're saying, "Thanks a Million."

Anti-Saloonists Meet in St. Louis

St. Louis, Nov. 29 (AP)—Veteran [illegible] gathered in this traditional center of beer brewing today to plan a new campaign.

They met as the executive committee of the National Anti-Saloon League preparatory to the opening Wednesday evening of the league's 28th annual convention Sunday.

A primary purpose of the meeting, league officials say, was to begin a new advance against [illegible].

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

The dance over, she stole to the porch and watched a moon of gold come up between the trees. It made an avenue of rippling fire across the lake.

She wanted to be down there lost in a young, impetuous lover's arms. Six months ago it was like this.

Now he was extremely content to be dancing with others.

He found her standing there in a maze.

"What's the matter, dear? Not having a good time?"

"The music stopped. I wanted to look at—"

And she waited, inwardly seething, expecting him to wax impassioned. A woman do 20 or 30 years to difference. He was quite comfortable, an arm carelessly around her.

But she couldn't bear it. Once to walk down there again, Dress.

"What else?"

Furiously: "I have a coat!"

"Okay, let's trot."

They gazed at the water. He said, pressed: "Seen enough, Darn—"

They had sat there smoking and talking. She became desperate. She thought of rushing to the coat, tearing her clothes and—running away. Leave this place and him forever.

But she couldn't leave. She waited. His watch hanging on a nail above the pillows. And [illegible] Nine [illegible] Ten o'clock.

"I'm a Fool"

She sprang from him rapidly, her eyes flashing. He grabbed her arm, locked down and saw her tears. At last he guessed. He had her in his arms, rocking with laughter. "Have it you any other, li'l—"

She said bravely: "I'm a fool I suppose."

"Sure you are, dear. I love you."

That was the bright peak of the night's joy for N. She didn't mind—that is not very much—when Vera led Ricky aside for a very tender farewell. Everyone was in exaggerated mood—noisy, singing and the drive [illegible]

* * *

About two weeks later Nell saw a letter with Ricky's unmistakable handwriting on Evans's stationery. Envelope empty and torn across. But an address on it—Vera's address.

At dinner, Ricky suddenly caught a glimpse of the envelope. He turned red and said abruptly:

"Oh, by the way, Nell, I've been hearing from Vera Holmes. She phones. Wrote me a letter yesterday. You know, her uncle is a big power in the Ajax motor industry. She's going to speak for me."

Nell felt a quick jerk of alarm. If she knew you were married, would she bother getting you a job?

"Glad she doesn't know it. If that would stop her. Listen here, Nell—I'm not going on working for the wages of a cash girl much longer."

After five years in college I'm going to get going. I'm not one bit particular who helps me on the way."

She said faintly, "You're right of course."

But it bothered her. Vera was a spoiled, beautiful, seductive woman. Ricky liked her. And a man is such a fool in a designing woman's hands.

* * *

A wintry day in the end of October. Nell stood at her window watching a bit of paper blown with dust down the wind.

It was not happy in this house of laughter ever. Tonight there had been bitter unpleasantness. Mom wasn't managing well. Behind on the rent; gas and light bill overdue.

"But, Mom," Nell pleaded, "We've got to live on my salary. Suppose it isn't enough. Em got by for four years."

Henry Mason entering with that noiseless panther like tread heard these words.

"See here, young lady," he ordered, "don't give impudence to our mother. This is my house and she's running it!"

His wore his good suit. Right up to the minute. Nell let her eyes dwell witheringly on his new wine-colored shirt and maroon tie.

She said softly, incisively: "And Jimmy has no shoes!"

He flung from the room. He was white with rage. At dinner he paid her back. Jimmy wolfed his food. He took enormous bites. His father watched and suddenly reached over and shoved the astonished boy's face into a plate of hot bread and gravy; held him there half-choking, the gravy in his nose and mouth.

"Eat like a pig, then be a pig." Nell left the table.

Off With Vera

But this wasn't the cause of her sad, pervading uneasy. She pretended that it was. She shut her mind against the bright, secret alarm which whispered to her and had been whispering days now—weeks.

Suddenly she rushed over to the closet, put on her street dress and with a hurried excuse to Mom, left the house.

She came around the corner. A big car stood in front of the house, the street lamp on it. A long, brilliant blue Cadillac. Ricky had his hand on the door, talking to the girl at the wheel.

Nell ran toward him. She called. He neither saw nor heard. He got in. They drove away. He and Vera.

Nell looked after them with a stunned, wavering smile. She began to climb the steps. They were endless. Her heart went with thin rapidity.

She stood with her back against the door and blankly surveyed their room. On the card table were two cups; a tray full of ashes. Two cups. He had brought her into this room.

She sat on the couch unable to think. Engulfed in dull, opaque apathy. Anger rose slowly within her. A red blaze of anger. He had brought Vera Holmes into this room of theirs.

Ricky Returns

At 11 o'clock Ricky returned. He stood with his hand on the knob of the door, staring at Nell as though she were a ghost. He came slowly, and took her hands.

"How long have you been here?"

"About three hours."

She said, dumbly: "I saw you," and felt his hands suddenly tremble on hers.

"You saw me? Did you see Vera, too?"

"I saw you both. You were just getting into the machine. I called. You didn't hear."

Unconsciously her eye fell on the two cups.

He said aggressively: "Oh, you saw the cups. Mamie came in as I was finishing my dinner. We had a cup of coffee and a cigarette together."

Then he explained. Completely. In her with indignation Vera was in high spirits. She talked loud. She was insistent.

He didn't want to stand there on the stairs arguing with her [illegible] but, intending to take her to her car. She wouldn't leave.

Finally here is he didn't know how to get rid of her. He got in. It was a good party.

"But it didn't seem square when you weren't in on it, Nell."

She thought, excited: "Next time he won't think of me. He'll take the good time!"

Her mind went on, frightened. "He likes parties. He likes women. It's only a question of time when Vera—"

The thought was beyond bearing. She sprang from him, saying with agitation:

"Was I been married six months. Already you want other women!"

Candid Camera Discovers Muff-Bags

By ANNICE BRINK

A MUFF that's not a bag, or a bag that's not a muff should feel pretty much put out this season. They make smart additions to the ensemble, these muff-bags of wool and fur-fabric, or of velvet, which Miss Betty Corbett of Brookline shows here. And they are most inexpensive. Above, fur-fabric which looks exactly like Persian lamb and black wool in a coquettish muff-bag make of the coat and turban a complete ensemble.

LONG and dashing, with a carved crystal ornament on its zipper, this muff-bag of fabric is banded with fur-fabric that duplicates the silky wave of caracul. The felt has a smart swing-forward brim with a snug back . . . fine for that trot-about fur coat that muffles a collar high around your head.

QUITE as gay as the rhinestone butterfly perched on the newest velvet beret is the ruffle-skirted transparent velvet muff-bag the model carries. This type muff-bag can stand a lot of dressing-up-to. For shopping details on muff-bags, hats or coats illustrated, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

Health

Truth About Measles Is Told

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D

MEASLES IS one of the most contagious of all the diseases of childhood. It is often regarded as a trivial thing, when in reality it may prove to be an extremely serious infection.

Many mothers believe that it is best to "expose the child to measles and have it over with." This is entirely the wrong attitude to assume. It is too great a risk to take.

What may prove to be a mild case of measles in one child may turn out to be quite serious in another. The disease is especially dangerous to infants and to children under five years of age. If he can be guarded from it the child is indeed fortunate.

Measles leave the victim in a weakened condition. The disease lends to a lowered resistance and a susceptibility to other infectious conditions. It is because of these complications, such as pneumonia, that we dread this common affliction of early life.

Let me warn against the dangers of self diagnosis. It is well to be familiar with the symptoms of measles, of course. But it is well to remember that even the doctor may be uncertain about the diagnosis in the first stages. Merely because the child has a red, spotted rash is not sufficient reason to assume the disorder is measles. There are other diseases that have spotted rashes.

BE ON SAFE SIDE

To be on the safe side call your doctor to conform or dispel your suspicions. Until the physician arrives or until the diagnosis is definitely made, keep the child in bed and away from other children. This will prevent the spread of the disease to others and keep your youngster to escape complications.

The early symptoms of measles are often confused with those of a cold. The sufferer complains of inflamed eyes, running nose, cough and fever.

The rash does not appear until about the fifth or seventh day. Usually it is first seen along the sides of the face, behind the ears and on the neck. It soon covers the entire body.

Keep the child in bed and protect the eyes from glaring lights.

DICKY ALLOWED TO VISIT MADGE

CHAPTER 310
By ADELE GARRISON

I THINK HARRIET was so perturbed at having permitted me to talk so long in my weakened condition, that she would have promised me almost anything to insure my going to sleep.

At any rate, she gave a quick hearty "Of course" in answer to my query, as she tucked the covers around me, and upon that assurance, I fell asleep.

But she kept her promise. When next I roused from slumber, as deep as it was refreshing, I found my husband sitting by my bedside. He evidently had been watching over me assiduously, for he was bent forward in his chair, both hands resting upon the coverlet of my bed, but alas for romance, he was sound asleep.

I watched him with tender amusement for a few seconds, then I put my hand lightly upon his. He started, opened his eyes, stared for the fraction of a second, and then grinned sheepishly at me.

"I'm a fine bedside watcher, I am!" he jeered. "Missus Graham's little boy, Dicky, always faithful and wideawake—that's me. But seriously, sweetheart!" his voice suddenly sobered—"how are you? You look like a million dollars."

BOYS WAITING

"I feel like two million." I told him smiling, "now that I can see you again. What about the children?" When can I see them?"

"Want to hear a state secret?" he interposed, his eyes sparkling. "Of course—"

"Well! If you're good, and obey all the little rules, they're going to let you get up and roam around upstairs tomorrow, go in the nursery 'n' everything. Then, if that works out, the next day you can go downstairs."

"Hooray!" I waved an arm above my head, but Dicky caught it and brought it down on the bed again.

"That's just what you're not to do," he said severely. "You're not to exert yourself at all. Just lie still and let people wait on you."

"I'll be good," I said meekly, "if you'll just let me see Junior—and Roderick, of course."

"They're waiting just outside like faithful little spaniels. Harriet and I was to let her know when you wakened, and then she could tell whether or not they could come in. I'll just go and tell her you are awake."

I caught at his hand as he moved away, pulled at it until he lowered his head to mine.

"I want to see them," I said, "but I must see you alone afterward. There is something I must tell you, something you must attend to, for Harriet says I must be absolutely idle."

He stooped and kissed me suddenly—and warmly.

"You can lay to that, milady," he said emphatically. "All right. I'll try to engineer the tete-a-tete as soon as the kids get through their hugging match. Don't let them maul you around too much—but Harriet will be on the job."

He left the room, and Harriet came swiftly in. She took my pulse and temperature, and looked me over critically.

"You're the answer to a nurse's prayer," she said with such unusual flippancy for her, that I stared at her, amazed. "I never saw such resilience. Now, as a reward, let me prop you up with your pillows, and we'll let the boys come in."

Junior and Roderick evidently had been carefully drilled for the occasion. They came into the room on tiptoe, and advanced gingerly toward the bed, their round little faces so fearful that my throat muscles tightened in sympathy, and I could not utter a sound. But I smiled and opened my arms wide, and with a howl, Junior leaped across the open space, flung himself on the bed beside me and hugged me tight, while Roderick, making a quick flanking motion, ran around to the other side of the bed and put his arms around me.

What is meant by ....“8th WOMAN”

One word explains her confidence

YOU probably can name at least one woman who is never at a disadvantage, who never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to!) and whose spirits never seem to droop.

If you'd ask her, how she does it, you'd probably find she is that eight woman who relies on Midol. Eight million women once suffered regularly every month. Had difficult days when they must save them-selves and favor themselves, or pay the penalty. But a million have accepted the relief of Midol.

Why be a regular martyr to pain month after month? Compelled to favor yourself and save yourself on certain days? Midol could change this. Might have you out dancing. And even if it didn't keep you absolutely free from all pain for the entire period, you would receive a measure of relief well worth while!

Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you through your worst day. They do not contain any narcotic.

This boon to women is found in any drug store—usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, drop a card to Midol, 170 Varick St., New York, and get a free trial box postpaid, plainly wrapped.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Doesn't Want To Go On With His Engagement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A very strange thing has happened, which makes me question whether I am an utter ad, or just like the majority of my sex.

I have been engaged to a girl with whom I was devotedly in love for over a year. I suppose I can't help being a good deal of a Puritan in my soul.

Last summer, while this girl's family were away and we were alone, we became too friendly, with the result that I have no interest in marrying her. Call me a cad if you will. I expect I am one, but this girl's yielding to me has put a barrier between us, and I should like above all things to get out of my engagement to her. PURITAN.

Times have changed radically since the World War, and people are not bound by engagements where no love exists, as they were a generation or two ago.

It will be useless, I know, for me to tell you how sorry I am for this girl, whose only fault is that she cared for you too well, rather than wisely. May I suggest that you take to mind the quotation which runs—I'm quoting from memory, and the words may not be exact—"Much shall be forgiven because she loved much." And, my dear man, aren't you the censured equally, if she is? I sincerely hope you may be generous to her.

An Overbid TURNED Into a VICTORY

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It is disconcerting to realize you can make a Grand Slam and bid it, only to have opponents overbid you and take a small set.

The deal below would have been worth a minimum of 2000 points to North and South had they been allowed to play a seven diamond or seven heart contract, but they could not overbid East's sacrifice of seven spades.

They scored only 150 points with their beautiful cards.

East, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♡
1 ♠ (1)	2 ♣	3 ♣	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♢	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	5 ♢	Pass	6 ♢
6 ♠	7 ♢	Pass	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) East's hand is a proper opening bid of four spades, whether vulnerable or not, but East decided to make a trap pass, hoping to be doubled at three spades when later he entered the bidding. With a freak distribution of this nature, it is almost certain someone would open the bidding, so he was sure he would have another chance to bid.

It will be noted that North, after hearing his partner make a free bid in diamonds, shows he has no losers in either clubs or spades, the two suits bid by the opponents.

By these bids he infers beautiful diamond support, so South was justified in bidding seven diamonds. East, however, was also listening to the bidding, and knowing he could not take a spade trick, saw no hope of defeating a Grand Slam.

He wisely bid seven spades and by finessing South's Queen of clubs, he lost only one club trick and one heart trick.

At seven spades he was defeated two tricks or 200 points, less the 150 points for honors, making a net loss of 150 points—an excellent exchange for a Grand Slam.

Washiable Corsets De Luxe

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ONLY the truly sylphlike figure can get along without a foundation garment of some restraining worth under the clothes we wear this season.

And even those exempt ones are going to regret their carelessness, some day, so the corsetiers tell us.

[illegible] many a girl who knows right well that she needs a girdle or corset, guess without because of straggle foundations picked up [illegible] without expert advice [illegible] to make her unfortunate [illegible] doing little to improve her [illegible]

• • •

The answer is beyond a doubt, that everyone hasn't got a stock figure to fit a stock girdle, and the fact remains that you can't wear a girdle with your own needs and thrive the way you can in a really model frock.

An expert in these matters told this department yesterday that a perfectly fitted foundation garment [illegible]-in-one or girdle—is not a great extravagance, even if you give a good sum for it, for the life of a good girdle which is treated with respect is usually about a year. Several cheaper, less durable foundation garments, which in the end cost just as much in the usual bird, et of the woman who uses them, she informed us, and she thinks it is all too, too sad.

• • •

It seems that you can demand a de luxe corset made of washable fabrics, and, following expert advice, launder it over and over again. It will stand up under the treatment and dry out to its original good fit. The models sketched here today are guaranteed washable, if handled correctly, and they are just as pretty and just as skillfully made as a corset can possibly be.

End Foot Discomfort New, Easy Way

Corns and Calluses Banished

By ARLINE GOULD

WHY DO FEET play such an important part in the composition of feminine loveliness? Because serenity is a quality of beauty, of course.

If you don't believe it, just take a look at the passing show as it parades through the shopping districts and note how few women really walk with a regal, inspired air.

It's a 10 to 1 bet that the victim of any nervous system—a system that is in a state of riot and unrest—is suffering from some pedal affliction.

And there's nothing like jangling nerves to upset the beauty cart.

To let one's nerves get control means premature old age, wrinkles, and the loss of youth's first bloom.

If your feet are having "tantrums," the trouble is due quite probably to a painful corn or callus. Feet are as different as figures and faces, and for that reason should have shoes to conform to the outline and build of the foot.

You wouldn't for a minute think of buying a pert-of-the-face bonnet if your face was long and thin and you possessed a too prominent nose. No matter how pretty an affair the hat was! Judgment and good taste would prevent.

Yet how many women select shoes just by their size without giving a thought to the outline and build of their feet. What is the result? Corns and painful calluses, naturally.

One of the most efficient foot aids we know of is a corn remover with a castor oil base. It's a safe and sane preparation, and while it doesn't dynamite the corn off at the first application, it will remove the most stubborn growth after a few treatments.

In fact, it is so efficacious that it is even used to remove warts. Only one drop is used at a time. After several applications, however, corn, callus or wart can be "lifted out." If you have a spot where a pet corn or callus keeps springing up (no matter how carefully you have your shoes fitted), apply a drop or two of this lotion after every bath.

Never use a razor or corn file on your feet. To do so is really courting danger. You risk blood poisoning every time you touch a sharp or rough implement to a corn, callus or wart.

If you would like to learn the name of this new, safe and sane foot aid, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beeckman ON GOOD Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Many times each day we housewives are confronted with a problem—that of treating the many canvassers with graciousness.

It is impossible for us to buy from each one. Won't you please suggest some polite way for us to address them?

Would-Be-Gracious.

This is, most definitely, a problem that we always have with us.

We want to be human about it, and as kind as possible, and very understanding of the canvasser's problem and his need to earn a living—but there is the baby crying, or the pie in the oven, or the telephone ringing and anyway very little time or real inclination to be gallant.

But well-bred people show their innate manners in just such exigencies as these, and we're callous and inhuman if we don't say our "no" as courteously and pleasantly as we would say it if a person socially important in our lives were looking on.

If a "talkie" were taken of most women dismissing canvassers, I'll wager they wouldn't enjoy looking at it!

There is always the "Good morning" or "Good afternoon" to be said. There is always the "Thank you" to be said. Then if we want to buy, all is well.

If we don't, a gracious but firm "No, thank you. I don't need any," or "No, thank you, I don't use that kind of machine."

If this doesn't work, as it won't with the over-persistent, ill-bred canvasser, or the high-pressure salesman who wouldn't dream of taking no for an answer, you'll have to put on pressure too, and say, "I'm quite definite about my answer. And I'm very busy. Will you please excuse me?"—closing the interview, and when necessary, the door.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Turkey Left-Overs

Three Supper Suggestions

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WAAB

NOT MUCH interested in cooking today, we'll wager, Thanksgiving being what it is in most homes! Feel you've had enough turkey and cranberry and pumpkin for a long time to come, don't you?

This will pass, and you'll soon be turning enthusiastically to the remains of the turkey in the refrigerator (where it is well covered, to keep it from drying out).

Turkey soup is only the last resting place of the once glorious bird. Before it reaches that stage there are many delicious "made dishes" every bit as good as the original roast turkey that can be served for dinner or for Sunday night supper.

Many look forward to Thanksgiving for the turkey hash that follows it. It is perfect when served with sauteed green peppers. If a very small amount of turkey remains, why not a delicate light souffle, served with a mushroom sauce?

For Sunday night supper we suggest a creamed turkey served in the center of a ring mold of dressing.

TURKEY HASH

Remove all meat from bones of left-over turkey and cut into small cubes. Cover bones with cold water, season with salt, pepper, onion and celery and cook slowly for an hour or two. Strain liquid. Moisten diced turkey with this stock, add a little left-over gravy and season to taste. Let mixture simmer a few minutes, and just before serving add a little cream or undiluted evaporated milk.

TURKEY SOUFFLE

2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
1½ cups milk
½ cup fine soft bread crumbs
2 cups chopped cooked turkey
2 eggs
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Few drops onion juice
Salt, pepper

Make white sauce of butter, flour and milk. Add bread crumbs, turkey, beaten egg yolks and seasonings. Fold in stiffly beaten white of eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven, 325 deg. F., about 45 minutes or until firm. Serve immediately with a thin, well seasoned cream sauce.

CREAMED TURKEY IN A STUFFING RING MOLD

1 tbsp. butter
¼ green pepper, finely chopped
½ cup fresh mushroom caps, sliced
1 tablespoon flour
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup rich milk or cream
1 pimiento, chopped
1½ cups diced, cooked chicken
2 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks
½ tsp. onion juice
½ tsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. paprika
Turkey stuffing

Melt butter, add mushrooms and green pepper. Cook 3 or 4 minutes, add flour and salt, cook until frothy, add cream and stir until sauce boils. Set over hot water, add pimiento and chicken, cover and let stand to become hot. Cream butter, beat in egg yolks, onion juice, lemon juice and paprika, and stir into the mixture. Continue stirring until the egg is set.

Place the stuffing in a greased ring mold. This can either be chilled in the refrigerator and served cold, or can be heated in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for about 20 minutes. Unmold on a platter and in the center, place the creamed turkey. Garnish with parsley and serve with cranberry sauce.

DENY FEDERAL BANK DIVIDEND

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Gilbert Seldes

GILBERT SELDES

A lot of people will sympathize with President Conant of Harvard, who is trying to create a new kind of scholarship fund which will not connect scholarship with poverty.

In the past, as all college deans know, the men who had to have the money went out for the scholarships; and those who had plenty somehow didn't try to get the honors. In President Conant's new scheme, if it works, the worthy student will receive as much as $1200 a year if he needs it, but also he may receive as little as $200 if he doesn't.

I recommend to the managers of the campaign to raise money from the Harvard graduates the simple song in Iolanthe when the peers in ermine themselves the equal of the slum-bred hero.

Recommends Iolanthe Song for Purpose

"Blue blood involves no shame," you remember, and hearts, they say, just as true and fair, may beat in Belgrave square as in the lowly air of London's worst tenements. And if good blood, surely bright minds.

A sprinter who came close to championship form told me once that he liked running because when he ran he didn't think. He just ran.

In that he was like a presidential candidate, only candidates run and talk, but don't think. Sometimes they have done their thinking in advance and sometimes they have other people do their thinking for them. But every four years, July to November is the great period of non-thinking.

Next year this is going to be particularly good for us because the campaign will be fought through on really important issues, and if the signs are right it will be the most vicious campaign in a generation.

Human Misery Due For More Capitalizing

That being so, wouldn't it be possible for the two parties to agree, before the platforms are written, to eliminate one subject from controversy altogether? It came up several years ago and we were told, virtuously, that we could not make political capital out of human misery. I would wager a bit that human misery will be capitalized to the last ditch next year.

The parties cannot agree on how they will get the unemployed back to work, or on taxation, or on spending. But I do not think it is impossible for the responsible heads of two big parties to come to a conclusion about the utterly helpless victims—leaving out of consideration the issue of their desperate plight.

If a man slides down a well, you try to get him out, and do not waste time deciding who pushed him in.

Real Fight Might Make Voters Think

It will not be exactly a friendly campaign, and gentlemen will forget themselves, so that there would be an advantage in not forgetting the American people and their troubles. The best thing that can happen is a real open fight between two plans or ideals of government. That would make the electors think, even if the candidates haven't the time.

We have a great chance to split the nation in two, with one party appealing to the unfortunate and the dispossessed, the other to the luckier side. We can approach the point of saying that those who have no money should have no votes. Or we can make it a principle that in America the prosperity of any group, large or small, is forever tied up with the prosperity of all the others.

I should be timid about placing a bet on which tactics will be followed next year.

"Doing Well" in Real Life Mother Role

(Picture from International News Photograph Inc.)

Mother and child are "doing well"—and why shouldn't they? Playing the mother role, in real life, is Evelyn Venable, attractive young screen actress. Her baby daughter, two days old, is the child of Hal Mohr, motion picture cameraman.

Everett 'Deficit' Proof Demanded

Mayor-elect Frank E. Lewis of Everett was called on today by Richard Darby, Everett city auditor to prove his statements that the city has a deficit of $225,000.

Referring to Lewis as a financial wizard," Darby said it was strange that Lewis who had not examined the city's books, knew of a huge deficit when he, as city auditor, believes the city is in excellent financial condition.

Darby said in a public statement that there was no reason why Lewis as mayor next year should have to set the tax rate any higher than $30.

He continued

"The mayor-elect seems to have forgotten his campaign slogan, 'Restore Respect for Everett.' I am issuing this statement so that confidence and respect for Everett will be maintained, which would otherwise be destroyed by allowing such statements as his to go unchallenged."

Freezing Weather Due Back Tonight

Button up your overcoat and prepare for some real cold weather.

By nightfall the mercury will have dropped sharply, the weather man says.

In some sections of New England snow flurries are scheduled. Boston, however will be free from the white blanket, the weatherman predicted.

Freezing weather will extend south as far as Memphis and Little Rock, Ark.

'GHOSTING' DR. DAFOE

Studied by Hershelt for Film Part

Hollywood, Nov. 29 (AP)—Dr Alan R. Dafoe, the celebrated Canadian physician, will be subjected to extensive diagnosis before the filming of a motion picture starring the Dionne quintuplets in which Dr. Dafoe will not appear.

The diagnostician will be Jean Hersholt veteran actor. He will portray the doctor in the photoplay after the unique experience of studying in the flesh the character he is to represent.

"Certainly," Hersholt said, "I would take a script and study the action, the dialogue, everything it tells of the character. Then, mentally, I visualize his appearance, his temperament, the very essence of him."

An experienced artist Hersholt then makes a series of sketches of the character.

"But, in this instance," he said, "Dr. Dafoe will be there for me to see, talk to. I can observe his mannerisms and acquire from the closeup, so to speak, all the qualities that I usually have to imagine.

"So far as I know, no actor has ever had the experience of learning his role from the living character."

Hersholt said he believed he resembled Dr. Dafoe and would attempt to be more typical of the doctor than the doctor himself.

He is scheduled to leave tonight with a company of 50 people from 20th Century Fox studio for Callander, Ont., the home of the quintuplets.

Peter McHugh's Relatives Sought

Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, today requested newspapers to help him find relatives of Peter McHugh, who was found dead November 16 in his lodgings in Shawmut avenue, South End. McHugh was an automobile mechanic 65 years old.

Two sisters and a brother are believed to be living in Greater Boston. Because the victim was first reported to have been a James McCarthy, Dr. Leary believes relatives may not know of McHugh's death. The body is unclaimed at City Hospital mortuary.

Hyde Park Auto Hits Patrolman

Patrolman Thomas McDermott 43, of 7 Pond street, Hyde Park, is in a serious condition at City Hospital as a result of being struck by an auto on River street, Hyde Park early today.

McDermott was crossing the street to pull a duty call from a nearby patrol box when he was injured.

He suffered internal injuries, cuts and abrasions.

30,000 Ask in Vain for Locked In Cash

Expense of $1000 Day Scored

By JOHN H. NOONAN

More than 30,000 depositors of the closed Federal National Bank were turned down today in a demand for Christmas dividends.

With the liquidating agents of the closed state trust companies making distributions in time for Christmas, the Federal National depositors hoped for similar treatment.

But official statements issued from Washington today by Charles Protops, chairman of the Scott Boston Lithuanian depositors committee blasted their hope.

"The Federal National Bank has been closed for four years and no dependable dividend has been paid," Protops said today. "The depositors have not received a dividend a long years.

Costs $1000 Day

Liquidating costs are piling up at the rate of $1000 a day, according to Protops, who believes from a study of liquidating statements that a dividend could be paid.

The South Boston man wrote to Attorney-General Cummings, Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor and the office of the receiver-general for closed banks only to receive the answer that no dividend would be paid this year.

"I am continuing the fight for a dividend before the end of the year," said Protops.

"The fourth anniversary of the failure of the Federal National chain will be 'celebrated' on December 11. It will then be two years since we have received a dividend.

"I represent 1500 depositors with accounts as small as $100 and as large as $30,000. We have received only 30 per cent in four years of liquidation.

$900,000 Expense

"All this time the liquidating costs have been piling up at the rate of $1000 a day. The liquidation of this bank, the largest failure in the history of New England banking, is one of the saddest events in the banking history of our country.

"If the costs of liquidation are allowed to go on at the present rate, the receivers, lawyers and their assistants will get more benefit of the assets than will the depositors.

"In four years we find, from a current statement of Receiver Frederick S. Dietrick, that expenses have totaled close to $900,000. Yet the people charged with the responsibility of protecting the depositors have collected only $22,000 from their stockholders. The stockholders' collectable assets total $1,539,565.

"For four months our committee, in conjunction with other groups, have made every possible effort to learn from some national authority how much money is now available for distribution to the depositors.

Assets $3,000,000

"We have been reliably informed through unofficial sources close to the receivership that there are now available assets totaling $3,000,000. That amount of money would give another 10 per cent to the depositors.

"In four years, with receivership costs mounting, we are certainly entitled to more than 30 per cent in dividends.

"If the bank statement of Sept 28, 1931, showing total assets of more than $42,000,000 and deposits of more than $28,000,000 was true, why have we not been given a more equitable settlement?"

Quins Now Just 18 Months Old—and Doing Nicely, Thank You!

EMILIE ANNETTE CECILE MARIE YVONNE

(World copyright, 1934, by NEA Service, Inc., and Boston Evening American).

Just 18 months old and looking forward now to their second Christmas, the Dionne quins are fast getting to be big, grown-up girls. Here they are in their newest picture, all dressed up for company, although our United States Thanksgiving was "just another Thursday" to them in Canada. Have you learned to tell them apart yet? Cover the names, and try. The line-up, this time, is Emilie, Annette, Marie, Cecile and Yvonne.

CAR CUT OPEN

Trapped Couple Freed

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bolton and their son, Robert, 21, were today recovering from shock at their home, 598 High street, Medford, following an accident in which they narrowly escaped death by burning.

Their car overturned at Park and Washington streets, Medford, and caught fire. Unable to open the doors they were trapped in the auto. Pedestrians were unable to reach them and summoned firemen, who extinguished the blaze and cut open the top of the car to free the trio.

Police said the driver of the other car was Clarence N. Swanson of Home street, Malden.

Pinkerton men were invariably the heroes of old-fashioned detective stories. They were romantic and mysterious. It was always a Pinkerton who pinned the crime upon the sneering villian.

The New England office of the famous organization is in Congress street. It is as hum-drum as a travel bureau. Daniel T. Green is the manager. He has 46 men and [illegible] in the room. He says Pinkertons won't take divorce cases . . . won't work for [illegible] . . . Operatives don't wear badges . . . and only five carry guns. Pinkertons don't go in for false whiskers any more. The outfit is now present at New England race tracks, as at a racetrack. It has a Rogue's Gallery of 15,000 faces.

Back Bay families at doors requisition private detectives to protect the family jewels nowadays, they rely on insurance companies. Or maybe they haven't any jewels!

In the Pinkerton family for four generations the agency is now headed by Robert A. Pinkerton, a Harvard graduate.

Acrobatic cheer leading, of the type popular at fresh-water colleges, isn't actually "verboten" at Harvard. It's just that such blood curdling antics wouldn't be in the old Harvard tradition.

Neither are boys from other sections of the country banned as cheer leaders. But it seems to be a coincidence that few of them are asked to lead. Bob Hall of Brookline, and Milton Green, track captain, were two of the four cheer leaders during the football season. There's only one legitimate yell at Harvard. It goes: Three Harvards . . . nine rahs . . . Three Harvards.

Cavorters and contortionists need not apply!

Sidney in One Of Her Best Roles

By GEORGE HOLLAND

It would take more than a Monday morning quarterback to pick Sylvia Sidney's first sweetheart in "Mary Burns, Fugitive" as Public Enemy No. 1.

Consequently when Miss Sidney as Mary Burns falls in love with handsome Alan Baxter, audiences at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters where "Mary Burns, Fugitive" is now playing will be in favor of her choice.

For Mr. Baxter, as Don Wilson, former all-star football player, is an impressive figure. When he is unmasked as Babe Wilson, bond thief, gangster chief, it is a dramatic thunderbolt and an amazing turn of events.

In the unmasking, by a grim new set of movie G-men, Don or Babe Wilson leaves poor Miss Sidney to face a 15-year sentence. This is a result of a spirited shooting fray in The Coffee Pot, a charming little cafe in the Catskills owned by Mary Burns.

* * *

It is here where the G-men catch up with Bob Wilson. It is here where your reviewer moreover recalled a certain play named "The Petrified Forest" written by Robert E. Sherwood last season, whose action was concentrated in a restaurant in the Great Desert and where another Public Enemy No. 1 shot it out with the law.

But "Mary Burns, Fugitive" tells the melodrama without psychological meanderings by the chief characters. Its story is wild and exciting, and pretty possible. That makes no difference. Miss Sidney is cast in one of her best roles. What could she do with the role of a girl caught in the net of circumstances is something that few of the Hollywood stars can do as well.

Every second of "Mary Burns, Fugitive" is entertaining. The picture holds as much action as "Public Enemy" or "G-Men." Pert Kelton plays an effective part in the unreeling of the story as "Goldie Gordon," a blonde wool-gathering moll whom the cops have planted to be Miss Sidney's cellmate.

Babe Wilson you see made a clean getaway after his combats with the cops. The efforts of the Law to track him down, using his erstwhile sweetheart as the bait, make the story.

Mr. Baxter gives evidence as Babe Wilson, his first important role, of being suitable for the films. Melvyn Douglas and Brian Donlevy are credible in their parts.

Miss Sidney owns the acting honors, however, and most credit for the film's success should go, in this opinion, to William K. Howard, the director. In the hands of a bad regisseur, this could have been well-nigh unbelievable.

Bernie's Here

Ben and His Lads Triumph

Ben Bernie and all the Lads, there are 17 of them, headline the stage show at the Keith Boston this week, where the film honors go to Edward Everett Horton for his work in "His Night Out."

The combination with band leader Bernie and his zany antics is a fast-moving affair, and the singing numbers which precede the program from beginning to end are entertaining.

With Ben Bernie are Lew Brice, Wally Vernon, the comedian Bernie discovered, and Phil Regan, tenor. The latter sings a number of songs, including "Sweet Adeline," "Sweet Sue" and "Just You, Just Me," and Ruth Lee sings "Love Me or Leave Me" and "Sweet and Low." Both do well.

Vernon, who is a comedian when he sings and when he doesn't, does a burlesque of Mae West, and Lew Brice, Bernie's brother, is a comedian who has a style of his own.

Clever timing, plus good comedy, marks the spring jumping act of the Monroe Family, and Lena, the bill the proper hokum touch, which is accentuated by the sound-house clowning of the McKinneys and Ben Bernie's chatter.

* * *

Scarcely a member of the supporting cast has a role. Edward L. Horton appears as Everett Horton and does well in that. "Night Out" all by itself is worth the price of admission, and those of Lew Hervey and a dog, Skeeter.

The physician pressing on Horton's self-conscious illness, tells him he has but three months to live, which gives him the impetus to dare everybody from public

Chase National to Sell Fox Film Control

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 29—The Chase National Bank, so long in control of the destiny of the old Fox company, will sell its film assets to 20th Century-Fox. Joseph Schenck, president of 20th Century-Fox, who has been in telephonic communication with the Chase bank officials, leaves for New York within a few days to close the deal.

At the time when Schenck, Darryl Zanuck and William Goetz made history by buying the old Fox company, the Chase bank retained its stock. Winfield Sheehan, one of the heads of the Fox owners, sold his interests so that while the new owners controlled the stock Chase National bank still had a voice in all production matters. Sidney Kent, a left-over from the old regime, has been put under a new contract for seven years by Joseph Schenck.

The future of Ann Harding, speaking purely from a business standpoint, is mapped out for the next year. Ann sails for Europe in February with her daughter, Jane Bannister, to make several pictures for Capitol Films. But until her sailing date, she will work steadily, having agreed to star in "The Indestructible Mrs. Talbot" and "The Witness Chair," Rita Weiman's story, for Radio.

This means she will be unable to do "The Old Maid" for Paramount because she will make a number of pictures abroad. The chances are she will not have to pay the heavy California state income tax which is worrying so many of our film people.

Chatter in Hollywood: The Dorothy Sebastian-Bill Boyd matrimonial break will never reach the divorce courts. A reconciliation has taken place and Dorothy and Bill are back together again to try married life all over.

No picture in a long time has been so widely discussed as "The Life of Emile Zola" Paramount, judging from the unanimous words of praise, it will make film history. This picture comes under the heading of Cosmopolitan Pictures and will be given special exploitation as befits a picture of this calibre.

Warners have been coming through regularly with box office hits the last few months and have now established a standard that is going to keep everybody on the lot on their toes to maintain.

People's Symphony To Play U. S. Music

"If American music is to live, the young contemporary composer must be encouraged," says Fabien Sevitzky, conductor of the People's Symphony Orchestra.

"And the only way to encourage him, is to play his music.

"You've got to supply a market. Music is like any other commodity."

And that is just what Mr. Sevitzky is doing. The concert presented by the People's Symphony Orchestra, he has included a work done by a contemporary American composer.

Not only that, but at each concert he has introduced a young American artist as a soloist.

"On the whole, American music and composers have been somewhat neglected," said Mr. Sevitzky.

'Oakley' Is Stanwyck Hit

By ANN AMES

The story of Annie Oakley, whose name has become legend in the saga of the Wild West, is unfolded stirringly this week on the screen of the Keith Memorial. The film, aptly enough, is called "Annie Oakley."

Appearing in a role suited to her talents, Barbara Stanwyck gives a moving performance of the young girl whose marksmanship made her famous where the shows of William "Buffalo Bill" Cody appeared.

Torn between the loves of two men, one of them her rival in the wild west show, she concedes to the egotistical Toby Walker (Preston Foster) who accidentally wounded her during one of the exhibitions.

Joel Sayre's clever wit and humorous hand can be seen through many parts of the writing while the skillful direction of George Stephens, director of "Alice Adams," gives the picture the needed tone of realism.

* * *

Sitting Bull, played by Chief Thunderbird, gives the picture its comedy sequences and makes himself unforgettable by his fine acting as the chief who united the two sweethearts.

Moroni Olsen makes a fine "Buffalo Bill" as he is very bit the flourishing colonel as he appeared on the covers of the dime novels.

Melvyn Douglas as Jeff Hogarth, talent scout for Buffalo Bill's show is the other man, who unsuccessfully strives for the affections of Annie Oakley.

The production tries to be accurate in nearly every detail and the story that Annie Oakley married the first man she met in a sharp-shooting contest at the Cincinnati Gun Club is accepted as a matter of fact.

* * *

Probably the most spectacular incident in "Annie Oakley" is the scene in which the girl sharpshooter neatly plugs a bullet into a cigarette between the lips of the German Crown Prince.

Miss Stanwyck's performance is studied and effective. The costume department has paid special attention to her wardrobing, and her strong beauty is enhanced by her colorful garb.

Marxes Romp to Win Loew Applause

Top Bill at Orpheum, State

By HARRIS MORGAN

Good old-fashioned laughs are the style at the Loew's Orpheum and State Theaters this week, where the three Marx Brothers are starring in "A Night at the Opera."

Restraint is something you just can't think of when these comics put on their new laugh routines forcing you to topple over into the aisles at their lusty gags and pranks.

Like all the Marx pictures and musical productions the story is not too sensible or important but it is a setting for Groucho's rat-tat-tat jokes, Harpo's pantomime and yet gives Chico a chance to act as a foil for both of the brothers.

The singing ability of Allan Jones, the juvenile lead, makes him a star possibility for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Three scenes in this production leave you absolutely limp from laughter: a mob scene in a two-by-four stateroom; the three Marxes disguised as an elderly couple and a rocking chair and the last one at the opera.

The funniest is when Harpo and Chico insert the score of "Take Me out to the Ball Game" into the opening overture of Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

The first strains of this favorite of the nineties is the cue for Harpo and Chico to play catch with a baseball in the pit of a symphony orchestra while Groucho comes down the aisles shouting, "Peanuts, score card and chewing gum."

Of a more serious note is the number "Cosi-Cosa," set in the steerage of the liner with gaily costumed peasants dancing after Allan Jones finishes this song.

Here Chico does his piano specialty, using that famous finger while rendering "All I Do Is Dream of You." Afterwards Harpo plays two selections on the harpichord.

Kitty Carlisle as Rosa joins with Allan Jones in two duets, "Alone" and the prison scene from "Il Trovatore."

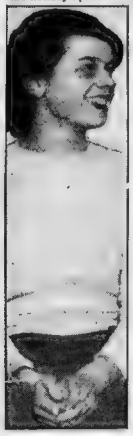
Debutantes Continue to Hold Social Spotlight

EVER SINCE schools and colleges conceived the idea of letting their fatigued, book-satiated students have a breathing spell at the end of each calendar year . . . the holiday vacation season, from Thanksgiving Day to New Year's, has been a period of festive celebration . . . The desire for a change, youthful vitality, and the holiday spirit all combine to stimulate the endless round of parties and dances . . . Even pape, who attends to the most difficult part of the parties, absorbs a good measure of the good will toward men which pervades the holiday atmosphere, throws caution to the winds, and learns the joy of giving . . .



JOAN SAGENDORPH

Of course, upon the debutantes, who are always party-minded anyway, falls the burden of starting the ball rolling, and no one can say that they have shirked their task . . . On Thanksgiving Eve, three debs made their social bows with a large ball at The Country Club . . . Yesterday, three other debs hurried from their turkey-laden family tables to greet their guests over the tea tables at the Algonquin Club . . . while one of their sister-debs from Boston was being honored at a similar party in New York . . . Nor does this first surge of the holiday party wave end here, for there was a debut tea-dance at The Country Club this afternoon, and still another will be held in Cambridge tomorrow . . .

With delicate, costly party frocks with wraps and shawls, to shield them from the rain-drops, debs and post-debs dashed from their cars, under the canopy and on into the Algonquin Club, yesterday afternoon . . . Then, after pausing to powder noses and make everything shipshape, they went in to greet their hostesses . . . Betty Prescott, Jane Matthews and Peggy Paine, the debs of the hour, and their mothers, Mrs. Winward Prescott, Mrs. Henry Newton Matthews and Mrs. Jonah H. Paine formed their receiving line in front of an antique gold hand-painted screen which was surrounded with the green of cedar and fur . . . Peggy Paine's dress of old gold brocade fitted perfectly into the background, and her flowers, a Grecian spray of bronze chrysanthemums and steeva, tied with a bow of gold ribbon, carried out the color motif . . . Jane Matthews wore a formal tea gown of blue and silver lame and carried a bouquet of blue forget-me-nots and pink roses . . . Betty Prescott wore green velvet and carried Joanna Hill roses . . .

Both Mrs. Prescott and Mrs. Matthews selected the popular Dubonet red . . . Mrs. Matthews' gown was velvet and she wore a corsage of orchids, while Mrs. Prescott wore lame and a corsage of gardenias . . . Mrs. Paine also wore orchids with her gown of black chiffon . . .

Preside at the Tea Tables

POLLY PAINE, Peggy's post-deb sister, and Jane Dinsmore, daughter of Mrs. A. Eliot Ritchie, presided at the tea table, which was set with a yellow damask cloth and decorated with bunches of yellow and lavender flowers, and long yellow candles . . . PARADOXICALLY ENOUGH, play time means work time at the Junior League. While members of the cast are hard at work rehearsing their parts for "Water Babies" this year's Christmas play, others are busily making scenery and selling advertising, and Mrs. Walter Robb, Jr., and Mrs. Charles Higginson are doing their share as co-chairmen of the publicity committee.

Grew-Wood Ceremony Today

AT A LARGE WEDDING ceremony in Holy Trinity Church in Philadelphia, Mr. Henry Sturgis Grew, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sturgis Grew of Marlborough street, was married to Miss Selina Richard Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Davis Wood of Philadelphia, this afternoon.

The bridegroom's sister, the former Ethel Hooper Grew, who was married to Mr. Frederick Bruce Robinson last June, was one of the bridesmaids, while Mr. Robinson acted as an usher for his brother-in-law.

Mrs. William G. Foulke, 2d, a recently married sister of the bride, was matron of honor and the other attendants were Miss Margaret Wood, a cousin of the bride and Mrs. Lloyd M. Coates, both of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Alexander Montgomery of New York.

Mr. Francis K. Kernan, Jr., of New York, who was one of Mr. Grew's classmates at Harvard was the best man. The ushers were Duncan F. Thayer of Lancaster, Arthur L. Hobson, Jr., of Beverly, Mr. Robinson of Cambridge, Sampson Smith of Short Hills, N. J., Walter L. Carey, James Jackson Lee, Nathanial Saltonstall Howe, Sumner Wheeler White, Jr., and Richard D. Wood, all of New York.

Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the Locust street home of the bride's parents.

Miss Wood attended the Mademoiselle Moos School in Paris and made her debut in 1929, in Philadelphia, where she is a member of the exclusive Acorn Club.

Mr. Grew prepared for college at St. Mark's and graduated from Harvard in 1924. At Harvard he was a member of the A. D., and D. K. E. clubs and the Hasty Pudding-Institute of 1770, and in New York, where he is now in business, he is a member of the Knickerbocker and the Racquet Clubs.

CASEY OUT AS REDSKINS COACH

AUSTEN LAKE

Saga of Hardihood; B. C.-H. C. Fans Defy the Elements

THE FAITHFUL MARTYRS of the B. C.-H. C. football wars, who have sat hip and thigh on the stadium bevels through the years and risked freezing their internal plumbing, will be out again tomorrow to play the season across its last white line.

Austen Lake

Man and boy, the devoted followers have been coming with bed quilts and foot toasters and sitting the winter games away under swirls of celestial confetti, showers of sky-juice and boreal blasts. Greater love hath no man.

The Big Game crowd is that way. They sat last Saturday like tinned herrings, cheek by jowl, in Princeton's big drydock. Fifty-six thousand, whose teeth chattered till they sounded like a national convention of telegraphers in an instrument test for speed-and-sending accuracy.

Snowflakes big as globules of tapioca pelted down, swirling and eddying in the updrafts from the windy tunnels.

There were moments when the screen of flakes shut off the upper reaches of the stands from the field, so that the patrons could neither see nor be seen. But they sat on, quaking in unison, till twilight came and the field judge piped all hands to the steam-heated refuge of the college clubs, taverns or waiting trains.

Sugar Bowl Ambitions

THINGS ARE BETTER NOW in the B. C.-H. C. games than they used to be when they were played in the Boston ball parks and the throng was exposed to the gusts that whistled up their hosiery.

The B. C. field sits in a little hollow, sheltered on the seaboard side by a terrace, shrubs and aristocratic homes, and there is the suggestion of intimacy that makes for imaginary body-warmth, generated by the mass of customers.

The weather is capricious at this time of the season, so that anything may happen from a mild afternoon like that during the 1933 game, suggestive of primrose and magnolia trees, to that of last year when the game was played under a heavenly shower-bath, with the field a frog pond; or the day in 1932 when the chill edge of a northeaster penetrated a raccoon coat like a carving blade through a Christmas goose.

But it is something pretty significant in the lives of the rival players to win this one, B. C. hoping to mar the unblemished record of the Holy Crossers, and the latter trusting to wriggle away for the sake of being invited to perform in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl.

Football Expert an Extinct Animal

I AM THE ONE WHO THOUGHT that Boston College would lose, nobly but indubitably, to Michigan State last month, on the same day that I thought Holy Cross would mangle Manhattan like the family wash in a cellar wringer.

So that the best that may be said of my opinions is that they can always be relied on to poke up the indignation of the football fanatics, who are the most fanatical fanatics known to man.

It is strange considering all my pride in being right, how unerringly wrong I can be in the simple matter of picking which of two teams should lose

Such mishaps are variously answered with fan letters, some of which start, "Anathema, my dear sir, anathema," to communications from the downtown alumni association opening, "Listen, mugg, I seen by the papers where you said . . ."

Little matters count for so much in games like tomorrow's. The ends, like Ed Daughters of Holy Cross or Ed Furbush of B. C., might wear their fingernails extra long and catch touchdown passes by the width of their unpared talons. And how am I to guess that?

I have seen a better Columbia team push an inferior Michigan team this way and that and lose, 19 to 7, because the Columbia players, who were hitting grand drives and perfect second shots, were four-putting the greens.

Sitting on a Lead

IN THE THREE HOLY CROSS GAMES I have seen, I would say the only noticeable oddity is the team's habit of stuffing a touchdown or two down the opposition's gullet and then lapsing into a state of tolerance.

This must be what Jocsie McKenney, the B. C. coach-emeritus, meant when he slurred the enemy by saying they were a one-touchdown club, though I suspect this was more for purposes of moral B. C. stiffening than a scientific H. C. estimate.

If this is so it is a dangerous fault.

I have seen several teams reach out in the swooning moments of the game this fall and snatch the opposition by the tailfeathers

Once at Syracuse, after Penn State had sat on its early 3-0 lead into the final minute of play, an Orange halfback gumshoed around end on a delayed sneak and galloped for a touchdown.

And once at Princeton, when Penn splintered through for six points in the first four minutes and had the contest apparently embalmed, Princeton rapped out a tying score and winning goal in the twilight, because Penn squatted on its lead like a mother hen on an orphaned egg.

Goes by Contrasts

ON THE BASIS OF RAW ENERGY and stevedore type of strength, Holy Cross seems to have what it takes. But the minority teams in these games have a way of whistling up a head of steam and puffing to miracles.

I can flip back through the pages of memory's book, which is an interesting album crammed with pictures of Max Baer and six-day bicycle riders, and tell you how in 1933 an underrated B. C. team won, 13 to 0, on Johnny Breitas' 50-yard pass to Ed Furbush. Or in the 1928 game when I for sweet charity at Harvard Stadium, which H. C. as the ... won, 7 to 0, on Phil O'Connell's 58-yard run.

... games often go by contraries. Considering that it is ... the players' young lives to win this contest ... calamity to lose it, I don't think anybody will be ... else tomorrow.

Nice Clean Game Those New Yorkers Play—O, Yes Indeed

Fists and feet fly between linemen as Andy Palau gets away punt. Every man in the picture save one is either giving or receiving. Crowd of 77,000 enjoyed the fisticuffs and football. Fordham won, 21-0.

Attempt To Bribe Ram Captain

New York, Nov. 29 (INS)—Joe Maniaci, brilliant Fordham captain and fullback who led his fighting team-mates to a 21-0 victory over New York University yesterday, disclosed today that he and Americo Sarno, the Rams' star tackle, had been offered $1000 each to "throw" the game.

Maniaci said he was so "damn mad" that he went out to beat the Violets by a big score. He succeeded.

"Sarno and I were going to the gym on Friday to change our clothes," he said, "when these two fellows stopped us. They were flashily dressed and were driving an expensive car. At first we were laughing about the whole thing but when we finally realized what it meant we got good and sore."

How sore Maniaci and Sarno actually were was best demonstrated by their playing yesterday against N. Y. U. before 80,000 persons at Yankee Stadium.

Maniaci threw the long forward pass to Andy Palu, quarterback, for the first touchdown and Sarno did yeoman work in blocking for Jack Galivan, who scored the second.

This is Round Two as the Rams of Fordham ran amuck among the Violets of New York University. The fans became so excited that hundreds of the 77,000 present rushed from the stands in the hope of participating in the free for-all. The gendarmes finally restored order.

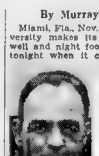
B. U. Plays Miami TONIGHT

By Murray Kramer

Miami, Fla., Nov. 29—Boston University makes its 1935 grid farewell and night football debut here tonight when it clashes with the University of Miami as one of the features of a gala festival week.



Pat Hanley

The outlook, on tonight's battle, which is expected to attract 12,000 persons to Miami Stadium, is hard to figure.

The Miamians will [illegible] condition as for hour after hour, but they are also "football weepers." According to those connected with football down here, Miami hasn't got a chance, although nobody here has ever seen Boston University play.

Pat Hanley, however, refuses to become cocky or feel that his charges will have a soft game. In fact he is also inclined to be pessimistic which makes the outlook rather glum all around.

According to Coach Hanley, the fact that his club is playing its first game under lights plus the weather (it's really hot here, too) is bound to handicap his Terriers.

To counter balance the heat, the Terriers will wear cotton instead of their usual woolen jerseys, no undershirts and no stockings.

Kiley Picks Eagles to Whip Holy Cross

PURPLE SEEKS COAST BID

By Walter Kiley

The Boston College grid picture has brightened considerably during the past 48 hours.

The holiday at Sandy Burr Country Club in Wayland has accomplished wonders for the boys.

Physically and mentally they are ready for Holy Cross tomorrow. Improvement of the injured regulars, insuring every one of them fit to start, has resulted in a cheerfulness and optimism which is the dominant note on the eve of the game.

Paul Flaherty, Tom Guinea and Pat Avery, among the most serious casualties from the Boston University game, are back in the thick of practice.

All of them will play, Flaherty starting at quarter, Avery at right half, Guinea to spell Attilio Ferdenzi.

Ed Driscoll, dependable line smasher, is still a doubtful proposition, but even he should play some time.

The boys are anxious to get into tomorrow's game. They eagerly anticipate it.

They don't underestimate the Purple with its undefeated record and background of staunch defensive play, but are sincere in their belief they can turn in what to most football followers will be termed an upset.

CAPTAIN STARTS

Having followed both teams closely all year, having seen the Eagles beat Michigan State and Providence, and Holy Cross as it won over Colgate, Carnegie Tech and Bates, we believe the Eagles not only can but will win.

Well received news is that Capt Joe O'Brien of Hyde Park will start his first game of the year for Boston College.

Injured the day before the opening of the fall gridiron practice season, the red headed leader has sat on the bench throughout a long list of games, uncomplaining, while a split tendon of the finger took week after week of healing.

He takes over for sophomore Jim Cahill who has plugged a gaping hole nicely. Cahill, who will spell O'Brien, was first to congratulate his captain when Downer named the latter as starter.

O'Brien makes the only change in the Eagles' lineup. Flaherty, Tom Brennan, Avery and Ferdenzi constitute their starting backfield. Flaherty passing and running, Brennan kicking, blocking and running, and Ferdenzi the main threat as a ball carrier.

Vin Keough will be in at center. Al Psenny and Paul Sweeney, the guards; Ted Galligan and Andy Dominick, the tackles, and Ed Furbush playing the opposite wing from O'Brien

Owner Marshall Dissatisfied

Ex-Harvard Star to Devote Time to National Youth Project

By ANN MARSTERS

Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American

Eddie Casey, former head coach of Harvard, will be definitely through as coach of the Boston Redskins after next Sunday's game with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

By mutual consent, he and George Preston Marshall, owner of the Redskins, will tear up Casey's two-year contract with only the first year filled.

Incidentally this contract called for a salary of $5000 instead of the reputed $10,000.

Thus, the first experiment of professional football with a major college coach, comes to an unhappy ending.

Marshall is frankly dissatisfied with the showing of the Redskins this season—not only on the field, but at the box-office.

He is now of the opinion that college coaches do not quite come up to the professional game.

At the start of the season, it was agreed by football experts that the Redskins should be up among the leaders.

The material was there—but where were the plays? And as the season progressed, there was almost open rebellion between Casey and the players.

Owner Marshall feels that he was "taken" into signing Casey by Casey's friends, who assured him that it was the best possible move he could make.

Both Casey and Marshall are disappointed to discover it was not.

It is probable that Casey will have nothing to do with football coaching next year, for he will devote his time to the National Youth project, of which he is the active head.

The first hint of Casey's severed connections with the Redskins was given three weeks ago in "The Gist About Town" column of the Boston Evening American.

Kayo Lam Breaks Record of Feathers

Boulder, Col., Nov. 29 (AP)—Fast-stepping Bill (Kayo) Lam has no illusions about "one-man" football even if he is the new holder of the national grid record for yardage gained in scrimmage.

"No back can get very far unless the other fellows go and there and knock 'em down in front," said the 154-pound University of Colorado quarterback, who yesterday completed his college football career with a mark of 1043 yards in scrimmage for the season.

His record is 28 yards better than that held by Beattie Feathers, now with the Chicago Bears.

CHESTY INJUN IN GARDEN MAT DEBUT TONIGHT

Al McCoy Meets British Boxer

Mixes With Marshall

DON, STEELE IN OTHER BOUTS

By Jack Conway

Six of the leading wrestlers in the world will battle in Paul Bowser's tournament at the Garden tonight, which will lead up to the naming of an opponent for Dan O'Mahoney, world champion.

Ed Don George, former title holder, is among those who will compete. George will clash with Charley Strack tonight in a tussle that will be decided by two out of three falls.

George isn't yet satisfied O'Mahoney is his master. He is of the opinion that with a fair referee in the ring he can upset Dango.

Charley Strack also has hopes of getting a crack at Danno, and will try to eliminate George tonight.

DEATH GRIP

Ray Steele of California, who recently tossed King Levinsky in 20 seconds in a mixed bout, will collide with Billy Bartush of Chicago, in another feature tussle.

Jim Londos has always rated Steele as one of the best wrestlers in the world. There was a time when if you wished to meet Londos you first had to try to eliminate Steele. Few wrestlers were able to accomplish that feat.

Bartush is a rugged grappler and is well versed in the fundamentals of the mat game. He should give the aggressive Steele a real test.

The third feature tussle will mark the Boston mat debut of Chief Little Wolf, Navajo Indian, who will oppose Floyd Marshall. Chief Little Wolf has been a sensation in Californian rings. His famous "death grip" has enabled him to wreck the opposition.

I saw Chief Little Wolf in action in New York and he is a first class grappler.

You will like his war whoops as well as his wrestling, while his "death grip" will give you something brand new in the way of grappling holds.

GREEK CHAMP

Marshall has shown here before. He always boasted first class mat skill.

Hans Steinke of Germany will have the fiery Danny Winters of Cleveland as an opponent in the semifinal.

Rivals Elect

Dan Daley, tackle, has been elected captain of the 1936 English high sixteen. Harry Gorman, left half back, will captain Latin.

Chief Little Wolf, coast sensation, will make his Boston mat debut at the Garden tonight when he meets Floyd Marshall in one of the feature bouts in a triple windup show. The Chief defeated Man Mountain Dean and Jim Browning in recent matches.

Title Bout To Victor

AL'S CHANCE OF LIFETIME TONIGHT

New York, Nov. 29. Al McCoy of Boston latest ring sensation, will try to out-punch and outbox Jock McAvoy, English middleweight, when they meet in a ten-round bout in the New York Garden tonight. McCoy is a 10 to 8 favorite.

Al McCoy

This bout will mark McCoy's first appearance in a New York ring. McCoy became a national figure in boxing when he outscored Lou Brouillard in a bout held in Boston.

McCoy will have a decided weight advantage when he faces McAvoy. The boxers have agreed to weight in at 171 pounds.

McCoy will barely be able to make this notch. He is expected to put on three to four pounds between the time he weighs in and the time he enters the ring.

McAvoy is a natural middleweight, and will not weigh much over 162 pounds. He could make the middleweight limit of 160 pounds if necessary.

Under the rules of the New York Athletic Commission it is necessary for McAvoy to weigh more than 160 to clash with McCoy, who is a light heavyweight.

The bout has a New England flavor. McCoy and his managers, Barney Fox and Bill Brennan, come from Boston while Dave Lumiansky, McAvoy's pilot, hails from New Bedford.

If McCoy disposed of McAvoy, he will be signed to clash with John Henry Lewis in a bout for the world light heavyweight championship.

Rangers Win On Patrick Goals

Young Lynn Patrick silenced some of the critics who have been censuring his father by coming up with a pair of goals to give Rangers a 2 to 1 victory over Chicago Blackhawks in their holiday engagement.

Until young Patrick eased himself into the picture the Hawks were set to regain possession of first place in the American division, for "Mush" March had scored in the opening period.

Lynn put the Rangers out in front early in the second stanza and the Blue Shirts managed to protect their scant advantage for the remainder of the game.

With Les Canadiens as their opponents, Detroit Red Wings engaged in their fourth no-decision game of the season, and are now only one point in arrears of the Blackhawks, while the division of points gave Les Canadiens full title to second place in the International Division.

Brain Cubs bumped into another defeat, losing a 3 to 2 decision to Rhode Island Rede in Providence. They are now nine points behind the pace-making Philadelphia Ramblers, who have lost only one game in seven starts.

New Haven Eagles broke a second place tie by shutting out Springfield, 5 to 0. Frank Jerwa starring with two goals.

B. C. Parade

Boston College undergraduates will stage their annual pre-Holy Cross game automobile parade and smoker tonight.

Penn Submerges Cornell, 33 to 7, in Franklin Field Gumbo

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29 (US)—A sea of mud and a driving wind failed to stop Penn's red and blue team from trouncing ill-fated Cornell 33 to 7, on Franklin Field.

A crowd of 45,000 witnessed the 42nd edition of the longest unbroken series of football games in intercollegiate history.

The victory enabled Penn to finish the season with four victories and four defeats. Cornell ended its most disastrous season without a victory and a tie with Columbia as the only high spot.

Penn scored in every period, using passes effectively despite the slippery condition of the field and the ball. Frank Murray, star of the all-junior backfield, passed to O'Neill for the opening touchdown.

Murray failed to convert, but later in the period the Penn quarterback crashed through from the one-yard line for the second score. His drop-kick for the extra point was blocked.

Bill Kurlish scored Penn's second period touchdown on a short plunge through center, and this time Murray converted.

At this point, Cornell's outplayed forces tightened, and a series of line plays moved the ball from their own 37 to Penn's four-yard stripe, from which point Andy Pierce went over. Gordon Stofer added the extra point.

Elverson took Raiten's punt and raced 67 yards to a Penn touchdown late in the third period, and Dougherty swept around end for 44 yards and Penn's final touchdown in the fourth chapter.

ANTI-OLYMPIC

New York, Nov. 29 (US)—Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, Senator Edward P. Costigan of Colorado, and Senator Frederic Van Nuys of Indiana have joined in opposing American participation in the Olympic games to be held in Berlin next summer.

Senator Glass wired to the committee on fair play in sports:

"I would have as little as possible to do with Germany as long as the Nazis persist in their brutal treatment of the Jews, Catholics and dissenting Protes-

In a telegram to George Gordon Battle, who with Henry Smith Leiper is co-chairman of the committee, Senator Costigan declared:

"You and Dr. Leiper are giving heart to those everywhere who believe in fair play by your support of the finest American traditions of human freedom, equality and fraternity."

In the same vein, Senator Van Nuys asserted:

"I desire to reassert my position as favoring withdrawal of American participation in the 1936 Olympics."

TEMPLE BEATEN

Philadelphia, Nov. 29 (US)—A long touchdown pass from Phil Miller to Stuart Smith and the unerring toe of Walter Doble tells the story of Bucknell's astounding 7-6 victory over "Pop" Warner's powerful but erratic Temple Owls in rain-soaked Temple Stadium.

Bucknell's thundering herd, fresh from a 9 to 0 upset of Penn State the week before, took advantage of a 15-yard penalty against Temple to score what proved to be the deciding markers in the first period.

Penalized for holding, Temple kicked from behind its own goal-line to the 46. Miller heaved the slippery pigskin to Smith for the touchdown, and Doble, the Bucknell kicking expert, was rushed in for the conversion.

From then on, Bucknell played inspired football to hold Temple until a fumble in the fourth period enabled the desperate Owls to cross the goal-line. Late in the second period the Herd held on the one-yard line.

On several other occasions Temple threatened to break through but not until the Bucknell fumble late in the final stanza were the Owls able to tally.

Salem Boy Wins Place On All-Star Eleven

By John C. Hoffman
International News Service Sports Writer.

Chicago, Nov. 29 (INS)—Completing a poll of 16 representative football coaches and a group of newspapermen, International News Service today presents its first and second All-Middle West teams for 1935.

The selections were made on the basis of two points for a first team vote and one point for a second team vote.

As was expected, Minnesota dominated the voting, placing three men on the first team and a like number on the second. Notre Dame and Ohio State each won two positions on the first team.

Several of the coaches expressed the unsolicited opinion that anyone of the three outstanding middle-West teams—Minnesota, Ohio State and Notre Dame—could beat the choice of either the East or Pacific Coast.

The player who received the most points was Wilwich, Minnesota tackle, who was an almost unanimous selection for all-star honors and received a total of 48. Following [illegible] was Berwanger, Chicago great halfback, who undoubtedly was a Middle West star at halfback. Berwanger drew a total of 42 points.

Other high scorers in the point tabulations were Reise, Minnesota fullback, who ran far ahead of Simmons of Iowa. Reise finished one point behind Berwanger, with 41. Richard Smith, Minnesota tackle, was a popular selection with 36 points, while Jones, Ohio State, was easily the pick of the tackles and Tangora of Northwestern, the best [illegible]

HUSKY Relay Shot TO PIECES

The greatest task that faces Eddie Parsons, Northeastern halfback, in preparation for the coming campaign, is to rebuild the mile relay.

Eddie Parsons.

Last year the N[illegible] had no passing combination consisted of Al Hakanson, Frank Tuscher, Jack Fitz, and Ev Eldredge.

It was expected that only Eldredge would not be back, but Tuscher and Fitz have also not returned this spring. Hakanson is the lone veteran.

The 1934-5 crew broke the Northeastern record several times, and among other feats defeated the great Manhattan and Holy Cross runners.

[illegible] who was last year voted as an alternate, will take up one of the posts. Although comparatively inexperienced, he is very fast.

This season's schedule follows:

Jan. 25, Prout Game, Boston Garden; Feb. 1, Millrose Games, Madison Square Garden, N. Y.; Feb. 8, B. A. A. Games, Boston Garden; March 7, I. C. A. Games, Madison Square Garden; March 14, Bates, Lewiston, Me.; March 21, Union Club Games, Boston Garden, tentative.

HARVARD Yale's Last '36 GAME

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 29 (INS)—Harvard will return to its old position on the Yale schedule, that of last game of the season, beginning next year, Malcolm Farmer, Eli director of athletics, said today.

In recent years Harvard and Princeton has alternated the last position on Yale's schedule. Beginning next year, Yale will play Harvard on the Saturday before Thanksgiving and Princeton the week before.

Yale next season will play Cornell [illegible] Navy, Georgetown, Dartmouth, Brown, Princeton and Harvard.

Army will not play Yale again until 1937.

BOSTON-N. Y. Team Victorious

Cleveland, Nov. 29 (AP)—The northeast reserves, made up of players from New York and Boston, defeated the Midwest Reserves 5 to 1 in the women's national field hockey tournament today.

Muriel McClelland, of Boston, scored three of her team's goals on a field second place of group for the game. Cathryn Snyder of Boston and Janet Meyer of Vassar College scored the other goals.

Joseph Otter, of Chicago, scored the goal for the Midwest Reserves.

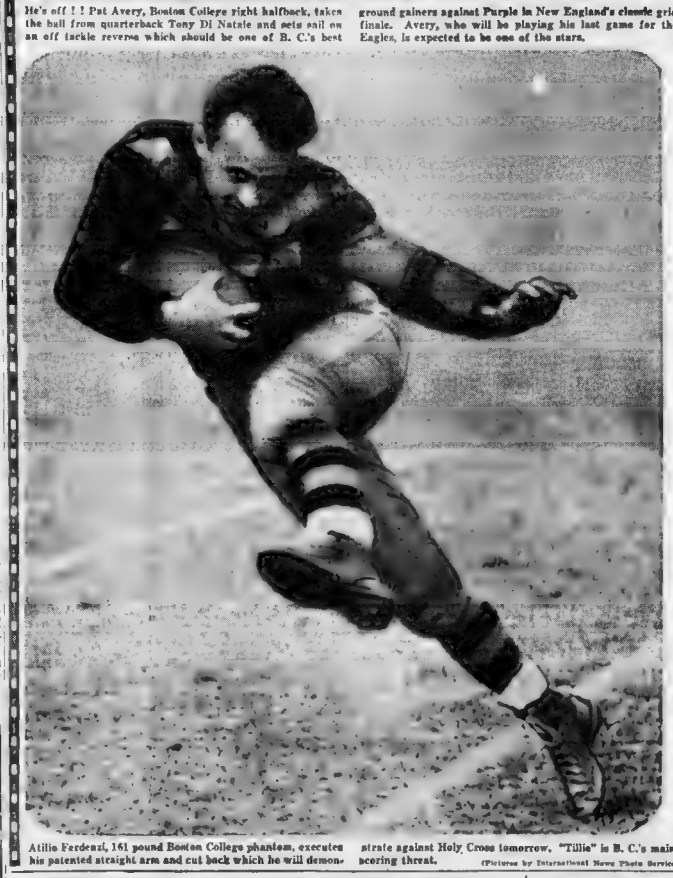
XANDRA RULES ROOST AT BOWIE

Two Reasons Why Crusaders Will Have No Romp

He's off ! ! Pat Avery, Boston College right halfback, takes the ball from quarterback Tony Di Natale and sets sail on an off tackle reverse which should be one of B. C.'s best ground gainers against Purple in New England's classic grid finale. Avery, who will be playing his last game for the Eagles, is expected to be one of the stars.



Attilio Ferdenzi, 161 pound Boston College phantom, executes his patented straight arm and cut back which he will demonstrate against Holy Cross tomorrow. "Tillie" is B. C.'s main scoring threat.

2 HOME MEETS For Tufts Matmen

Sports fans at Tufts are being given a month's rest before the basketball and wrestling teams go into competition.

They are highly hopeful for their wrestlers, but will see only two home meets, the first, against M. I. T. on January 11 and the last against Brown on March 7th.

The outlook for the court squad is discouraging, for only two of last season's regulars will return.

REDSKINS' ADIEU

One of the flashiest games of the season is expected Sunday at Fenway Park when the Redskins say farewell to Boston for the 1935 season with, they hope, a victory over Pittsburgh Pirates.

With a triumph over Eddie Casey's men Sunday, the Pirates can step into a tie with Brooklyn for second place in the Eastern Division of the National Professional Football League—if the Dodgers lose again, and the Dodgers didn't look too healthy taking it on the chin from the Giants, 21-0, on Thanksgiving Day.

Pittsburgh has a 6-6 win over the Redskins to its credit this season, but the Pirates are one team the Redskins are quite confident they can whip.

Incidentally, it will be "Ladies Day" when the Redskins and Rams clash, with fair sex fans being admitted for the 10 cents tax.

Wilson's One Best Starts in Fourth

By DAVE WILSON
BEST BET—XANDRA IN THE FOURTH

Bowie, Nov. 29—A heavy track forced a number of scratches this morning, including Bright Plumage, the Whitneyite which I had picked as my best bet.

Xandra, the W. Elliott standard bearer which has been improving steadily of late, looms as the safest hazard of the afternoon. Her last was a corking second to Manager Bill a few days ago when a strong stretch drive just failed to get her up in time.

Equalling at home on an off track the Elliott entry should register his first win of the Bowie fall meet today.

FIRST RACE

Miss Joker, Sumac, Go Now

MISS JOKER, a new arrival here this summer, comes highly recommended by the cracker. This fleet miss will be saddled by the astute Matt Hirsch and will be coming up fit to run for a big purse. MISS JOKER is after the custom on dirt. NOW fast and fearhearted horses to outlast the others for the winner award.

SECOND RACE

King's Pleasure, Tight Wad, Last Time

KING'S PLEASURE needs only to duplicate any one of his good New England races to grab the winner's purse. TIGHT WAD looks all over the one to fear. LAST TIME has trained well and shapes up as a keen long shot possibility.

THIRD RACE

Lotofun, In Front, Chilly Ebbie

LOTOFUN, second to My Kin, needs only to repeat that most recent performance in order to earn brackets. IN FRONT, if able to escape the also eligible list, shapes up as the stoutest sort of a contender. CHILLY EBBIE was a surprise winner last time.

FOURTH RACE

Xandra, Hot, Maid of Arches

XANDRA turned in a bang-up second to Manager Bill last time. A duplicate of that performance should result in victory for the Chatterton mare. HOT, nosed out by Naval Cadet, was in receipt of a poor ride that day. MAID OF ARCHES showed well in her graduation only a few days back.

FIFTH RACE

Bright Plumage, Bright Light, Wha Hae

BRIGHT PLUMAGE stamped himself as the cream of juveniles in the metric by scoring a handy victory in the Endurance Handicap. Back this time as a confirmed victor at six furlongs. BRIGHT LIGHT runner-up to the top one in the Endurance, again shapes up as the main danger. WHA HAE looks next best.

SIXTH RACE

Maddest, Lady Marlboro, Palamede

MADDEST drops six pounds off her recent record as Master Lad. Under 110 pounds, I find it impossible to go past her in searching for the winner. LADY MARLBORO finished close up to the top one last time. PALAMEDE displayed high speed in graduating from the maiden ranks. He can upset.

SEVENTH RACE

Zembla, Sambo Brown, Hereward

ZEMBLA was an odds-on favorite over this same lot last time. She was in receipt of weird ride that day, and that performance may be tossed into the ashcan. SAMBO BROWN and HEREWARD figure as named.

Skull Fracture

Two-in-One Twin Session for Eagles

Boston College stages a double practice session at Sandy Burr Country Club today.

A program of entertainment has been arranged for tonight by Bill McKenny, well known song writer and brother of Harry Downes' predecessor as head coach.

This entertainment is one of the high spots of the B. C. football season and the promoters tonight's to be best ever offered.

Hearst Shoot Popular in Chicago Area

Chicago, Nov. 29 (US)—A record number of entries is listed in the annual William Randolph Hearst National rifle matches from Reserve Officers' Training Corps units in the Chicago area, Col. C. A. Thuit, R. O. T. C. officer for the Sixth Corps area of the United States Army, said today.

Although competition for the Hearst trophies does not begin until January 15, entries are pouring in, Thuit announced.

In the competition for senior [illegible] University of Illinois has entered four teams and University of Wisconsin five.

Ripon College of Wisconsin, [illegible] has entered two teams.

Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., has entered one team and Michigan State Normal has entered one.

Military academies which have entered teams are Morgan Park, [illegible] Northwestern of Lake Geneva, two; St. John's, Delafield, Wis., and Western of Alton, Ill., four.

Twenty teams have been entered by Chicago high schools in the competition of junior units.

Detroit high schools have already entered 10 teams, while Rockford Senior High, Rockford, Ill., has entered five.

Waukegan Township High, Evanston Township High and Ironwood, Mich., High have each entered three teams.

Beloit, Wis., High, Campion Jesuit High of Prairie du Chien, Wis., and the A. D. Johnston high school of Bessemer, Mich., each have entered two teams.

One team has been entered by Joliet High and one from Grand Rapids, Mich.

ACE LOST To Tech Mermen

The Tech swimming team's hopes were given a jolt today when it was learned Ward Rafferty, ace long distance swimmer, is out indefinitely with injuries.

Rafferty was a star of his freshman team last year, and was looked upon as one of the best all around natators at Tech in recent years.

This setback was partly compensated when Ed Ryan and Jimmy Craig, both former varsity wrestlers, turned to swimming.

Mr. Boston O'Hara Swells Bowie Handle

By JACK CONWAY

THE DAY'S mail:

Dear Mr. Boston

Walter O'Hara is responsible for the large mutuel handle at Bowie . . . Walter has been a trifle off form, never betting on more than six horses in one race . . . He has been protesting against the fact there have not been enough starters in some of the races . . .

Rodger H. Pippen, sports editor of the Baltimore News and leading fight critic in this section, is enthusiastic about Jack Sharkey's comeback . . . He believes Sharkey is the only heavyweight who has a chance to win from Joe Louis.

Mr. Boston

William Irvine and J. U. Gratton have reached the parting of the ways . . . Gratton will turn his racers over to Emil Smith to campaign in Florida . . . Irvine will head for California next week to point Flamenco, great English thoroughbred, for the Santa Anita Handicap . . . The big bettors who hopped to Bowie following the closing of Narragansett Park made the Bowie meeting a success . . .

They tell me that the horse Walter O'Hara is going to name after you on a really fine one. He is by Mr. Diddie Diddle and is a fair yearling . . .

DAVE WILSON.

NEW TRACK

DEAR Mr. Boston

Glad to hear the American scooped the town on Walter O'Hara getting option on the Benning Race Track in the District of Columbia . . . He will not exercise option unless Congress legalizes racing . . . Benning is one of the oldest tracks in the country . . . It was discontinued as an active track 26 years ago, and has since been used for wintering horses and as a training ground for Eastern horses . . . Admiral Gravson and the Whitneys have always kept some of their horses at the Benning track . . .

I received a letter from one of the gang in the office saying they made a mistake when they shot Guste . . . The writer declared they should have shot me instead . . . I picked Guste to win in his last race at Narragansett Park, and also bet on him . . . Still have faith in John's Son . . .

ROBBY AHEARN, "Trackman."

I wish you would put something in your column about the show "Three Men On a Horse," which will be presented at the Plymouth Theatre on Sunday night in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

LIKES McCOY

DEAR Mr. Boston:

Get a little wager down on Al McCoy to win over Jack McAvoy in the New York Garden on Friday night . . . McCoy is boxing well, while his punching is hard and sharp . . . He will have weight on McAvoy, and should win over the British middleweight in decisive style.

Dear Mr. Boston:

Thanks for the note about Steve Dolan returning to the amateur boxing field at Mechanics Building on Saturday night . . . The Simon purses will do more than anybody to rekindle interest in boxing . . . They will also develop new talent for the professional ranks . . .

For our show on Saturday night there will be bouts at 126, 135, 147 and 160 pounds and in the light-heavyweight division. I'll be down near the ring when the firing starts.

Meyer Ace Of Army

SCHMIDT STAR OF NAVAL TEAM

Philadelphia, Nov. 29 (US)—While no mythical championships hinge on the outcome, upwards of 60,000 fans are expected to invade Franklin Field tomorrow to see Army's Cadets battle the Middies of Navy in the 1935 renewal of the traditional service series that began away back in 1890.

The educated toe of Slade Cutter enabled the Navy forces to nip the Cadets, 3 to 0, last year for their first triumph since 1921.

NAVY READY

It was an inspired and underdog Army eleven that took a 6-to-0 lead over Notre Dame and held it until a last-minute touchdown tied the score.

The spirit of their unexpected tie with this powerful Notre Dame team has brought the Cadets up to the Navy game in excellent frame of mind and condition.

Navy, on the other hand, after losing on three successive Saturdays to Yale, Notre Dame and Princeton, crushed Columbia and Penn in a fashion that bodes no good for even the inspired Cadets.

Lieut. Tom Hamilton's eleven, with the brilliant "Spead" Schmidt as the spearhead of its attack, has one of the best-balanced offensives in the East.

Army's chances of stopping Navy rest on the none too broad shoulders of 147-pound "Monk" Meyer. Meyer has been the most consistent of Army's scorers and ground-gainers all season.

GAR GLOOMY

The lightweight Army backfield star is not fragile, as his weight would indicate. He has borne the brunt of the Cadet ball carrying and does most of the passing and kicking.

Navy has no such outstanding stars as Cutter and Buzz Borries in its lineup this year. Yet Schmidt has done a fair job of filling Borries' shoes and has taken care of most of the punting as well.

Hamilton is uncertain as to his starting lineup. He is confident however, that his middies will make it two in a row over Army.

Silver-haired Gar Davidson, head coach of Army's eleven, forecasts a sad defeat for his charges. He said:

"To begin with we haven't qualified players in quantity. Any team is only as strong as its substitutes, and it's sad to relate that our promising pieces of last year have not lived up to expectations."

John Schmidt, big, fast Navy backfield toiler, whirls along in a tuneup for the Army game at Franklin Field in Philadelphia tomorrow. Navy is given a chance to upset its great rival, Schmidt is one of its best bets.

Everybody Worried But Mr. Patrick

Bruins' Boss Knows Team Will Get Going Soon

By Bill Grimes

Realizing that his key-men are veterans and that his middies will make it two in a row over Army.

Silver-haired Gar Davidson, head coach of Army's eleven, forecasts a sad defeat for his charges. He said:

"To begin with we haven't qualified players in quantity. Any team is only as strong as its substitutes, and it's sad to relate that our promising pieces of last year have not lived up to expectations."

Veteran hockey players require from six weeks to two months of intensive action before they will round into form. Unfortunately, the hockey fans who flock to the opening games, lack ability to differentiate the burden until the old timers are ready.

Two weeks before the season started, the Bruins, especially the old guard, were in far better condition than now. During the training season at St. John, N. B., Patrick drove his Bruins at top speed. After that rugged series with the Canadiens, the team was rarin' to go.

Because of that series it was necessary to make some eleventh hour changes in the N. H. L. setup.

Originally, the Flying Frenchmen were to have opened the series with Toronto. In all probability had the Bruins called off their pre-season series with Canadiens they would have been off to an earlier start.

The new arrangements set the Bruins back at least one week, and it was that enforced lay off which put them in their present slump.

At the wind up of their series with Canadiens, the Bruins went into Montreal where they marked time for almost a week. The night they took the ice against Maroons in the Forum, New York Rangers were playing their fourth game of the season.

It's fatal for any hockey club to lay off a week at any time, and this is especially true just prior to the opening of a campaign or just before the play-off.

Few of even the closest followers of professional hockey realize how important it is for teams to keep under fire.

Some are under the impression that when a team is listed to play four games in a week, it is not getting a square shake from the schedule makers. Such a belief is far from the truth. As a proof, just watch the Bruins perk up during the coming fortnight.

Potentially, the Bruins should be a fine offensive team but they have not been getting the breaks and there's no report that I've encountered where the breaks are as necessary as in professional hockey.

On the offense the Bruins have been just missing passes, and many of their shots have hit the goal posts instead of the strings inside the nets.

But, bear in mind, the three games lost were by one goal margins.

After the Toronto game, Manager Connie Smythe declared the Maple Leafs had played their best hockey of the season while beating the Bruins 2 to 1. Now there's no question in the minds of any fair minded fans that the Leafs are just about "tops" as a hockey club.

Well, if it required a freaky goal such as the one that "Pep" Kelly scored to give Toronto a verdict over Frank Patrick's charges, the Bruins MUST be a pretty formidable aggregation.

ENGLISH, Lowell LEAD

UNDEFEATED, UNTIED

By Will Connell

Boston English, Lowell, Canton, Whitman were the leaders today in the state school football championship argument following a colorful holiday program.

All four are unbeaten and untied by Massachusetts teams and this is about the only method for choosing a state champion.

No one can measure a football team's caliber in pounds or points distance or digits, except by arbitrary ranking. In the latter eye ons person's opinion is as good as another's.

Canton and Whitman with their perfect records, stand out, but naturally haven't the manpower to tackle larger schools. Bill Ohrenberger's English and Tom Keady's Lowell, though, could step out and give any team a battle.

No one will contend that either team is weak, its record thus. These two items, plus perfect records against Bay State teams entitle the pair to high honor.

WALTHAM OUT

English blanked its old rival, Latin, 14 to 0, and Dorchester drubbed Commerce by three touchdowns in the Fenway Park doubleheader which drew 20,000 fans.

Capt. Charley McPhail, English end, closed his school grid career on a blaze of glory. He'll do in college.

In the suburban headliners, Malden and Medford went scoreless. Brockton crushed Waltham's hitherto unbeaten record, 27 to 6. Lynn English held favored Lynn Classical to a scoreless tie. Salem beat Beverly by 25 to 6.

Revere romped Winthrop 12 to 0. Lowell crushed Lawrence 26 to 0. Marblehead drubbed Swampscott. Canton downed Stoughton and Whitman downed Abington. Arlington fought hard to edge Melrose, 6 to 0. Gloucester won by 20 to 14 over Peabody in another upset.

Soloists of distinction included Leo Donovan, ePte Lanzetti, Charley O'Rourke of Malden, Eddie Burns, Fred Wakeham, Hugger Hagnesan and Walter Carew of Medford.

STANDOUTS

Louis Montgomery and Henry Woronicz of Brockton, Johnny Krol, Charley Frechette and Joe Zeno of Waltham, Dick Messinger and Dick Wells of Marblehead, Alex Juralewicz of Salem and Bud Malone of Beverly, Teddy Williams of Gloucester and Ed Connolly of Peabody, Buddy Kimball of Lowell.

Al Rombini of Everett which downed Chelsea, and Bernie Lawlor of Brookline, which scored an upset in holding Newton scoreless. Bob Jackson of Whitman, Deremo brill and Swardick of Canton.

OFFICIAL TEAM ANNOUNCED MONDAY

BOARD HOLDS FINAL MEETING

By Will Connell

Naming the best eleven players from a field of several thousand young football performers is a tremendous task.

The Official American A Scholastic Board had practically completed this job, however this morning. The team will be announced in these pages on Monday.

Process of elimination of Official Team contenders is [illegible] interesting. Fred Ostergren of Arlington, Jim Mansfield of Haverhill, Ralp Sherwick of Hyde Park, Bill Ohrenberger of Boston English, Charley DeSimone of Somerville, and Bill Rodericks of Salem comprise the Board Coach meeting.

They have had several methods of "spotting boys. First there were some standouts left over from last year, and others prominently mentioned in early newspaper. It was easy to [illegible] boys, and follow their progress.

SCOUTED WELL

Then there was the balance of the field, who cropped up after the first couple of games and indicated by their play that they were in the running.

Regarding a boy of doubtful quantity, his own coach reaches of teams who played against him, and scouts who spend the season watching teams other than their own and are the best observers, all could be consulted.

So you see that it was possible over the season to scout the field quite thoroughly. Regarding individual batting for the same position on the Board's All-Team, the job was complex.

Many boys apparently were on a par, and in such cases it was necessary to go into much detail. One example will show how this is done.

A certain halfback was getting much publicity, was with a strong team, and seemed due for top rating. But then his team lost a big game, and it lost another, both upsets. Still, he had played well and it seemed the defeats shouldn't hurt his standing.

BIG FLAW

Investigation disclosed, though that the boy had a habit of drifting out of position when on defense and thus leaving wide open an area vulnerable to passes. Both teams that beat his team had scouted, discovered the weakness and taken advantage.

Now any boy will make mistakes, but a top flight gridman will not make one type of error time after time. Especially when his coach is trying to correct the flaw, as was the case.

The boy's ability in other departments was good, and the coach had no substitute to toss in. He was forced to keep the youngster in there, but discovery of this flaw helped the board in its grading.

Continued Tomorrow.

With the work being carried on as carefully you may be sure the 11 boys finally to be named will be the best in the field. Don't miss the Official Board school team Monday in these pages.

Tomorrow a partial list of boys considered for the team, and from whose ranks will be selected the final 11, will appear in the sports pages of the Evening American.

LEWIS HANEY ON BUSINESS:

Recent Market Action
SHOWS NEED OF CAUTION
In Stock Speculation

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Nov. 29—While advocating selective purchases of the more reasonably priced and less speculative industrial stocks, I have for some time commented upon the need for caution in speculation. The reaction in the market in recent days indicates the reason for this caution.

It has been apparent for two or three weeks that a good many of the larger operators have wanted lower prices. They have refused to buy their favorites at the high levels. Floor traders have realized the lack of demand for leaving stocks at tops and have tried their hands on the short side.

* * *

It takes continued buying to put stocks up. When buying by the larger operators ceases, the rise slows up. And when stocks don't go up, big traders always experiment to see if they won't go down. They would as soon make money by selling short. This is what has been going on of late.

Similarly, a good many people have for some time feared that they now have such good profits in stocks bought last spring and summer, that maybe they should take some of their profits. Unquestionably, there has been a good deal of such "realizing."

In some cases, as for example in Western Union, Case, and Western Electric, there has been much speculation, and the selling here on Tuesday is just a part of the game.

* * *

But none of this represents "liquidation."

It is rather to be interpreted as a part of the "technical position." So far, therefore, we may interpret the reaction as a mere "technical correction," which does not change the general trend of the market.

Already the "gap" left about two weeks ago has been filled. This may prove to be enough of a correction. Or the averages may settle down a little further, say one or two points to the level at which they held at the end of October.

Wednesday, being a pre-holiday trading session, will hardly be conclusive one way or the other, but a relatively dull day with prices fairly firm at least indicates that no heavy liquidation is in process.

* * *

In addition to the technical situation, however, one should note that certain political and business conditions have tended to cause uncertainty and hesitation in the stock market.

It will soon be only a month before Congress convenes and politics begins to pop. Radical monetary schemes may be proposed, but do not seem at all likely to be carried.

The President is talking about paring the budget, but it is hard to see how he can stop the Administration's spending spree now, especially with the election in mind. The New Deal party is committed to the policy of "coming back" (business recovery), and the only plan it has is to stimulate by government spending and "easy money."

* * *

People are beginning to realize that the automobile spurt can't go on forever, and that the more cars sold now, the harder it will be to sell them in the first quarter of 1936. But this merely means a lull, and a puncturing of the exaggerated notion that this fall's business can be added to the usual spring business. The total for the 12 months beginning with November, still seems likely to show a gain over the preceding 12 months.

The "fears" concerning the French monetary situation seem to be mostly cooked up to "explain" the market reaction. France is in a bad way politically, but most of the gold we have been getting has come here because of our over-valued dollar and to participate in our inflation market. Why should it leave immediately? If foreigners sell our stocks, it will be for the same reason that our own operators sell them.

REVIVAL
Of Hope and
COURAGE
CONFIDENCE ESTABLISHED

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

The revival of hope and courage is the principal reason for the American people to be thankful.

The gradual ebbing of the country's despair is perhaps a more significant change than the mere physical expansion of production.

The gradual resurgence of confidence is more significant than the pickup in car loadings, in steel production, or of the production of automobiles.

For in the last analysis faith is the cement which binds our society together. Likewise it is the first principle which sets in motion our complicated economic machinery.

* * *

If a statistical chart were prepared to measure the trend of men's hopes, it would show a striking recovery since the low point in the depression.

To a measurable extent, there has been a pickup in men's confidence in themselves and in their fellowmen.

Likewise, there has been a rebirth of confidence on our capacity to re-establish economic balance within the frame-work of American institutions of freedom and individual initiative.

The tides of human affairs shift slowly, but there is a trend toward wider belief that the American dream of raising average living standards can be carried to further fruition in the future.

Less Important

Of the lesser importance are the purely materialistic changes.

Total business activity, though still subnormal, is at the best level for this season in four years.

Business leadership has reasserted itself, and it has again been directed into productive channels.

* * *

The occasion calls for humane considerations of the needs of the underprivileged.

Obviously, it is necessary to safeguard those who are without employment through no fault of their own from starvation and needless hardship.

The finest gift to the unemployed would be to create new opportunities whereby they could again become self supporting.

Work from every aspect is vastly superior to doles or to leaf-raking.

Useful work adds to the heap of consumable goods, whereas maintenance of a large army of idle men constitutes a lien against the productivity of others.

The inevitable effect of perpetuating an unemployed group is to tend to lower average living standards.

The recent Brookings study has stressed that to achieve adequate social standards for the underprivileged it is necessary to expand the national income to new peaks by the most wasteful production, rather than through planning for artificial scarcity.

By WYLIE KING
London Financial Times
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

London, Nov. 29—The franc closed better in London in expectation of Premier Laval's victory in the French Chamber of Deputies, leaving little scope for profitable gold shipments.

However, some nervousness over Italian military movements helped to lower British government bonds from ⅛ to ¼.

New Zealand bonds were marked down from one to four points as a result of the surprising labor election victory in the Dominion.

British rail shares were better when Midland declared a regular dividend on non-cumulative preference shares.

The Bank of England bought 424,700 pounds sterling worth of gold; despite this and other recent purchases the reserve ratio was down 0.8 per cent for the week—at 38.8 per cent—as a result of the further 2,445,000 pound sterling rise in note circulation, which is expected to reach before Christmas a new all-time high mark.

American shares were inactive around Wall Street's overnight prices. London is uncertain of the United States' immediate trend. It is still bullish for the medium and long-term trend.

Western Maryland Railway reports for 10 months ended Oct. 31 a net surplus of $502,893, equal to $3.91 a share on 177,420 shares of 7 per cent first preferred on which no dividends have been paid against $804,322, or $4.53 a share on the first preferred, in 10 months ended Oct. 31, 1934.

TEXTILE
HIGH COURT

With the fate of the New England textile industry at stake, a brief in the Hoosac Mill processing tax case will be filed with the United States Supreme Court Tuesday on behalf of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers.

According to Russell T. Fisher, secretary of the association, the ca.- will be heard December 9, a week before the case of the Louisiana millers. It is expected that the court will rule on both cases together.

Pointing out that the processing tax has cost the American consumer nearly a billion dollars, Fisher described the impost as "palpably a sales tax imposed directly on the basic necessities of life."

"For the consumer, continuance of the processing tax will mean that there must be paid on every piece of pork, every loaf of bread and every piece of cotton cloth, a sizable tax concealed in the selling price.

"Even the most vigorous proponents of the unconstitutional sales tax have been hesitant about introducing this impost when it would affect the basic necessities of life.

"The processing tax, however, is palpably a sales tax imposed directly on the basic necessities of life, the prices of which greatly affect the living standards of the low income groups of our population."

B. & O.'S OCTOBER
Surplus $738,870

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad had a net loss of $2,595,151 in the first 10 months of 1935, the road told the ICC in data submitted in connection with a small abandonment proposal. This compares with net loss of $2,857,322 in the first 10 months of 1934.

October's surplus was $738,870, against a deficit of $286,293 in October, 1934.

WAGES TAXED
Payments To Begin in 1942

One of the points of the Social Security Act is the provision which entitles all qualified workers to receive annuities or old-age benefit payments from a reserve fund especially set up for this purpose.

This reserve will be built up by the federal government through contributions from eligible workers and their employers. The contributions, in the form of a tax on the wage income of workers, is to be paid equally by employers and employes. The tax will begin on January 1, 1937, but old age benefit payments will not become payable until January 1, 1942.

In order to provide aid for the needy aged prior to 1942 and for those persons who for one reason or another may not qualify for federal old-age benefits the Act provides for grants by the federal government.

These grants will be given to those States which provide pensions for their aged. In a study of the Act, the National Association of Credit Men lays the important requirements as individual State must meet to receive such grants:

1—The State law must be mandatory; that is its adoption is not optional with the county.

2—The State must participate in financing the pensions.

3—Present age limits must not be above 70. This limit must be reduced to 65 after January, 1940.

The last few years have witnessed considerable expansion of state legislation in the field of old-age pensions. By August 1, 1935, according to a survey by the department of labor, 35 states had acts on their statute books providing for state or county assistance to their needy aged.

Of these 37 state acts all but four (Florida, Kentucky, New Virginia and Nevada) were mandatory. Kentucky in the last election voted to permit its legislature to write its pension law into line with federal requirements.

Pension laws of six states (Idaho, Kentucky, Nevada, New Hampshire, Utah and West Virginia) provide for payments from county or city funds exclusively. Such laws conflict with federal requirements.

No existing State pension law requires a maximum age of more than 70.

Fourteen States, however, have age limits above 65. To receive Federal grants after 1940 these limits will have to be cut.

The States concerned are Arizona, Arkansas, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.

The variations in the types of pension laws and the insufficiency of funds indicate that a number of States will have to change their laws appreciably before they can qualify for Federal assistance.

Some States have made special provisions for such changes as may be needed, the association concludes.

More than twice as many persons in the United States received old-age pensions in 1934 as in the previous year.

Approximately 236,000 aged persons were granted cash aid under State old-age pensions laws last year.

Rail Operating Income Up

Net operating income of the first 40 railroads to report for October gained 62 per cent over like 1934 period and 36.2 per cent over comparable 1933 month.

Total net operating income of this group amounted to $44,767,000, against $27,623,000 in October, 1934, and $32,860,000 in corresponding 1933 month. In September their net operating income was $33,663,000, against $23,340,000 in September, 1934, up 44.2 per cent.

Gross revenues of these carriers in October were $175,012,000, against $148,838,000 in October, last year, an increase of 18.2 per cent, and $148,700,000 in October, 1933, a gain of 18.5 per cent.

Gross revenues in September totaled $157,504,000, against $140,645,000 in like period, up 12 per cent.

Dividend

Illinois Bell Telephone Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $1.50, payable December 31 to stock of record December 21.

NEED
For Increased
CAUTION
BOSTON HOUSE SUGGESTS

By STATE STREETER

While the prolonged upswing in stock prices naturally gives rise to caution, there is little probability of an important reaction before Christmas, in an analysis by Edward B. Smith & Co. of Boston.

Pointing out in their current "Outlook for Equities" that there have been few periods when the market has risen for so long without a corrective setback of one-third to one-half of the preceding advance, the investment banking house suggests the need for increasing caution.

Seasonal considerations will probably postpone an important reaction until after the turn of the year and those who are now partly liquid should remain so in anticipation of more favorable opportunities.

Calling attention to the liberal discounting of 1935 earning power, the equity study adds:

"Representative stocks are already selling at 20 to 25 times anticipated earning power for this year, and the shares of many companies enjoying especially wide investment and speculative appeal are being given an even higher market valuation."

Share Prices

In the long run, share prices tend to follow the earnings trend and if hopes for next year prove oversanguine, as they may, or should they be moderated as the time for Congress to convene nears, the market may undergo a severe test of its inherent strength, in the opinion of Edward B. Smith & Co.

Those who mentally picture the current market upswing to the sole property of industrial shares will find the listing of percentage gains like the various groups particular interest.

The Outlook, for Equities says: "The Dow-Jones industrial average has risen 53.5 per cent, the railroad average 37.8 per cent, and the utility average 105.5 per cent."

Those in the eight months rise utilities really featured the upswing and the rails were not quite the forgotten group some might imagine.

Bank Note

American Bank Note Company declared a dividend of 25 cents on the common, payable January 2 to stock of record December 11. This is the first payment since 50 cents was disbursed on January 2, 1932.

BOSTON BANK

Hails EVIDENCE OF Recovery

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Business is definitely emerging from the depression, according to the New England Letter issued by the First National Bank of Boston.

The bank sees recovery as a tribute to the vitality of our economic system. For natural recuperative forces have succeeded despite government policies angendering fear and retarding revival. None-the-less, the bank letter calls attention to the long-term faults likely to result from government interference with business.

* * *

Business makes progress because of its elasticity. Constant adjustments must be made in order to create benefits in the form of lower costs which pass on to the consumer. These have the effect of increasing consumer purchasing power and raising the standard of living. Business may surmount the difficulties placed in its path now, but the artificial measures threatening such elasticity are a threat to the future. Price control and extensive regulation will in time produce a rigid system which will be more efficient for natural forces to overcome. In the opinion of the bank letter, a rigid system is perilous when fluctuations are narrow. And hazardous when fluctuations are violent.

Rail shares continue to set the boundaries for the current phase for the market advance. Buying in such issues as Illinois Central and New York Central is of the very best, according to what the tape bears. While undoubtedly it is for accounts taking a long term view, and unconcerned with the chance of temporary weakness, it seems to us strong enough to promote further recovery in rail values before we need look for an important interruption.

Book Review: "Money, Bank Credit and Prices," written by Professor Lauchlin Bernard Currie Biagio DiVenuti of Boston University, is attracting considerable comment in the financial district . . . For the benefit of those who have not had an opportunity to examine a copy, it is a sort of Bible for bankers and students of current financial problems . . . Motor Fuel Storage Larger

An increase of 863,000 barrels is shown in storage of motor fuel at refineries and bulk terminals in reports to the American Petroleum Institute.

This gain, which follows one of 781,000 barrels in the preceding week, is seasonal. The addition to storage occurred mostly in California.

Demand for gasoline continues higher than last year and at record levels, but refineries are operating at a rate comparable with mid-summer.

There was a reduction of 17,000 barrels in daily average runs of crude oil to stills the past week, but the belief in the trade is that further curtailment is necessary.

Crude oil production totaled 3,710,650 barrels during the week, but the daily average for the country as a whole remains considerably above the recommended figure for November.

California is providing the great portion of the excess.

Power & Light

Utah Power & Light Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents on $6 preferred and 56 1-3 on the $7 preferred, both payable January 15 to stock of record December 14.

RESERVE Reduction LIKELY

EXCESS NOW 3 BILLIONS

Washington, Nov. 29 (US) — Probability that the Federal Reserve Board will increase reserve requirements of member banks to reduce the inflation possibilities of the three billion dollars now held in excess reserves was considered likely today in government financial circles.

The issuance of regulations effective January 1, 1936, under the new reserve banking act, whereby the board may change the percentage of deposits which member banks must maintain with Federal Reserve Banks, was viewed as paving the way for an increase.

Under the old law, the board could change the reserve requirement rates only in emergencies caused by inflation or deflation.

Idle Deposits

The problem of what to do about the record-breaking idle deposits in member banks has been a subject of serious study by the board, its advisory council and the open market committee since August, when the influx of foreign gold sent the excess reserves to new heights.

At present, the amount of deposits member banks maintain with Federal Reserve institutions range from 7½ to 13 per cent of their total deposits.

Reserves with Federal Reserve Banks amount to 8782 millions, with excess reserves held by member banks at 3079 millions on the last accounting.

Bars Speculation

Mariner S. Eccles, governor of the reserve board, indicated he favored increasing reserve requirements in order to danger of excessive credit expansion for speculative purposes becomes apparent.

Discussing the situation, M. S. Szymchak, a member of the board, said:

"Experience has indicated that this power of the board to check the expansion and contraction of the general supply of credit is of vital importance to the country, since the volume of credit is a factor in determining the course of business. Changes in the cost and volume of credit may tend to moderate excessive expansion and contraction of business, or, in other words may reduce the danger of inflation and di flation.

"The board's ability to influence the volume through discount rates, the power to change reserve requirements, and the power, exercisable through a majority of members on the federal open market committee, to determine open market policies."

Babcock & Wilcox

Babcock & Wilcox declared a dividend of 50 cents, payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 20. Similar amount was paid in previous quarters.

STATE ST. GOSSIP

Arnold Constable is understood to have enjoyed a pronounced spurt in business during the past month and that its November sales figures should be well ahead of a year ago. Some reflection of this situation probably was behind the strength in the stock yesterday. The stock for a time was a backward member of the department store group. The first half of this year was not a good one for the company, much of the spring business being transacted on a softening price level but since the summer the price trend has been favorable.

Standard Gas issues responded to the news that the Philadelphia District Court of Appeals had dissolved the restraining order against payment of interest due October 1 on the 8 per cent notes. The preferred shares, which have become volatile speculative vehicles, responded with a pronounced bulge.

Wesson Oil & Snowdrift's dividend declaration of 31½ cents regular and 37½ cents extra was a distinct disappointment to bulls on the stock. Similar "extras" were paid in previous quarters this year with the exception of the last quarter when the "extra" amounted to 37½ cents. The idea of a larger extra had been built up on the fact that the company had shown $6.60 a share for the fiscal year and there had been considerable buying of the issue in expectation of a more generous dividend.

Incidentally, there was considerable expectation in the Street among those interested that increased Beech-Nut packing distribution. This too was regular.

Private dispatches from London suggest that the Electrical & Musical Industries shares sold by the RCA and taken by a London syndicate have already been placed with investment trusts, particularly some of the Scottish trusts taking a large amount of the shares.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Trapped in Ocean of Molasses

Roxbury Man Tells of Wave Two Stories High

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

"Slow as molasses in January!" Ever hear that expression, boys and girls? Molasses sure has gathered itself in a fine reputation for being poky. But there are two kinds of molasses. Ever know that? I didn't either, until I ran across Charley Casey of 9 Ingleside street, Roxbury.

Charley taught me all I know about that other kind of molasses. It seems he had a brush with it one day—a January day, at that—and that doggone molasses was just too fast for Charley.

Yep—there are two kinds of molasses. Slow molasses and fast molasses. And there's another thing I never knew about molasses, too. They store it in tanks—big tanks—big as a house, yes, and a darned sight bigger. I never saw it in anything but cans and barrels myself—but it seems they keep it in big tanks, too.

Now let's get back to Charley Casey, and on with the story. It was in the year 1915—and in the month of January, remember, when molasses is supposed to be at its slowest. Charley had just delivered a load of goods at the Boston-Worcester freight yard. He was on his way back to his truck when he noticed that one of his bills of lading had not been signed, and he went back to the freight office. The clerk signed that other bill, and then, just as Charley was leaving, he heard a crashing of wood.

"On looking up," says Charley, "I thought an express train was coming toward me. But it wasn't an express train. It was molasses! The big tank, which stood by a siding in the freight yard, had exploded!"

That's another thing I didn't know molasses could do. But it does, and how it does!

"It burst on the Commercial street side," says Charley, "and the molasses, thick like glue, rushed like a wave up Copp's Hill as high as the second-story windows of the houses. And when this same wave swept back down hill toward the water-front it took along a house on Commercial street, a truck which was driving along it and two sections of the Boston Elevated—swept them across the North End playground and into the bay."

That's what the molasses did to the scenery and the architecture. But what we're interested in is, "What it did to Charley?" He got in on the back-slap—when the big wave had turned and started coming toward the bay.

"When I saw it coming toward me," he says, "I was paralyzed. I couldn't move for a couple of seconds, and when I could I started for the water. Then I must have been knocked down, for the next thing I knew, I was picking myself up in a freight shed.

"I could feel the pavement somewhere under my feet, but I was covered with molasses right up to my neck. I saw a freight shed door that had been knocked off its trolleys, and I climbed onto that, as if it were a raft. Then another wave of molasses came along, sweeping my raft toward a freight chute that led down to the water."

Charley saw himself being carried toward the chute and began to get ready for what was coming. The chute was wide and roomy—big enough to take the door he was riding if it hit end-on—and already a tide of molasses was sweeping it down to the water.

Charley began taking off his overcoat so he could have a chance to swim when he landed in the icy bay.

But luck was with him, for the moment. The door turned a little as it reached the top of the chute. It jammed in by opposite corners and stuck fast.

"Meanwhile," says Charley, "barrels, boxes, and even a stove began to pass under the door and drop about forty feet into the water. I learned later that twenty-one bodies were found down there, too, when it was all over. Maybe I'm pretty darned lucky I wasn't one of them."

But Charley was safe—comparatively so. When he saw that, he began to look around him for some way to get off the door without getting into that sea of molasses and being swept into the bay.

He says: "I saw some bales of wool piled high right next to my door. At least, I thought they were wool. But they turned out to be cotton batting, and that wasn't so good. The cotton would tear away by the handful every time I tried to get a good hold. It was while trying to climb this pile of bales that I realized I had hurt my leg. I didn't know it then, but it was broken."

Charley finally did get up on one of those bales, after a tough struggle. And there he lay, watching the scene of confusion that was going on down below, until the tide of molasses went down a little and firemen came in to get him out. They took him over to the navy yard, then to the relief station, and finally to the city hospital.

They didn't find Charley's truck, though, until two days later. It was under the wharf, with two dead men under it.

"IF I HADN'T GONE BACK TO HAVE THAT OTHER BILL SIGNED," HE SAYS, "I WOULD HAVE BEEN IN THAT TRUCK!"

That, Charley wants us to know, was the most thrilling moment of his life. "And," he says, "was I stuck up?" I wonder how long it took Charley to get that molasses off him, anyway.

MARION DAVIES IN STARRING RADIO ROLE

By N. F. T.

No dramatic effort by the big broadcasters has afforded the measure of anticipation that attends the coming of "The Covered Wagon" on the air tonight (WBZ) for the hour between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Marion Davies will move into the studio spotlight as the star for this striking "Beauty Box Theatre" presentation.

Numerous attempts have been made to acquire the services of Miss Davies for a feature setting of the kind by radio. Her busy schedule in the picture realm to date, has not made it possible for the blonde film favorite to embark upon any too extensive microphone work. At present, her brief Eastern vacation period from the Hollywood crest, enables her to star in "The Covered Wagon" adaptation, as it holds forth from coast to coast this evening, and originating in New York.

"N. F. T."

CHARACTER CHANGE

Heretofore, the above weekly "Beauty Box Theatre" offerings have had to do only with operettas and musical comedy. Tonight brings about the first entirely dramatic dial production to be made ready. Screen show historians can never write the full record of great camera achievements without giving "The Covered Wagon" its due rating among the most magnificent. Special treatment for radio serving, with Miss Davies as the star, should likewise place the great story not only high, but quite likely up on top as a microphone impression to be long remembered.

A medley of old Scotch airs, sung by the ensemble, provides the highlight of that quartet's concert period due again this evening (WEEI) from 8:00 to 9:00 p. m.

As her solos, Jessica Dragonette will sing "One Fine Day," from "Mme. Butterfly;" Dvorak's tender "Songs My Mother Taught Me," and "Love's Old Sweet Song;" "Molloy. Not forgetting the quartet turns, "I'm on a See-Saw" and "Kentucky Babe." Robert Simmons, tenor of the quartet, will offer "Take This Ring," from "Sweet Surrender," as his solo, subsequently singing a duet with Miss Dragonette, the romantic "Love Me Alone."

Stephen Foster's traditional "Old Black Joe" is the American folk song selected by Carmela Ponselle for her solo part in The Old Gold Hour.

TWO VACANT HOUSES MENACE, FIXIT TOLD

By MR. FIXIT

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

Mrs. H. T., Rockford street, Roxbury, writes:

"There are two vacant houses on this street which are a nuisance and fire menace in this neighborhood. Children play in them until as late as 10 o'clock at night, banging around with hammers, hatchets, and what have you.

"They go through our yard half of the time and I am in constant fear of one of my children being hit with the implements used in 'breaking' the house.

"Anything that you could do to rid us of this menace and nuisance would be greatly appreciated by all the people in the vicinity of these houses."

"Mr. Fixit" will take up the matter with the building commissioner. The trouble may take some time however, to be adjusted, for the owner of the building must be found and legal steps taken.

C. F. M., Pond street, Dorchester: "Mr. Fixit" will take up your traffic suggestion with the traffic commissioner.

C. F. M suggests the painting of a pedestrian lane crossing East College street at Everett circle, Dorchester. This lane would prohibit the parking of automobiles on the Columbia road side to allow safe street crossing by the pedestrians.

Sane Nationalism or Fatuous Internationalism—Which Shall It Be?

WHETHER as Adviser to the President on Foreign Trade or as Chairman of the Export and Import Bank, George N. Peek has made definite and valuable contributions to a clearer understanding of some of the biggest problems that confront us.

His views do not always jibe with the theories of the New Dealers, and at times he is outspokenly critical.

But no one doubts his candor, courage or competence.

He has just returned to Washington from an extended vacation spent in the farm belt, bringing with him two "ECONOMIC PLATFORMS," which we reproduce on this page, and which reveal his wide divergence from the agricultural, monetary, tariff and other policies of the New Deal.

One platform he describes as "A Policy for Internationalists," and the other, "A Policy for America."

They present what he describes as AMERICA'S CHOICE.

The decision between these two policies Mr. Peek regards as FUNDAMENTAL, whether for times of war or peace.

It is not a partisan question.

We cannot waver indecisively between the two points of view.

* * *

AS Mr. Peek put the matter, in a recent address, we must decide whether to take advantage of our position of geographical and economic security by developing our own country and tending to our own affairs, and thus contribute to world peace and prosperity; or to contribute our resources and markets to a common pool in the management of which ours will be but one voice, and not the controlling one.

"In other words," said he, "are we willing to dilute our strength with the world's weakness and thus reduce our standards of living?"

"America MUST Choose!"

Herewith are the contrasting policies of "INTERNATIONALISM" and "AMERICANISM" as set forth by George N. Peek, chairman of the Export-Import Bank and former Adviser to the President on Foreign Trade:

A POLICY FOR INTERNATIONALISTS

I.

Relaxation of immigration laws and regulations of immigration by international agreements.

II.

General reduction of tariffs:

(a) Laissez faire.

(b) Unconditional most-favored-nation.

III.

Stabilization of currencies by general international action (i.e., return to unregulated or foreign controlled gold standard).

IV.

Free export of capital and resumption of general foreign loans. Multiplication of branch factories and American direct investments abroad.

V.

Naval limitation by international agreement to meet the requirements of Great Britain, Japan, France, Italy and Germany.

VI.

Dependence on foreign shipping and communications.

VII.

Submission of disputes to decision of foreign dominated tribunals such as the World Court.

VIII.

Automatic intervention in European or Asiatic political disputes, as under the Kellogg treaty and Stimson doctrine. Collaboration with League in naming "aggressors" anywhere in the world and enforcing sanctions.

A POLICY FOR AMERICA

I.

Rigorous tightening of immigration laws:

(a) To reduce American unemployment.

(b) To reduce alien influence in our domestic affairs.

II.

Preservation of the American market, American price levels and American employment:

(a) Selective imports and exports.

(b) Tariff reductions only for specific advantages in individual foreign countries (i.e., reciprocity or conditional most-favored-nation).

III.

Stabilization of American dollar at American price level—thereafter stabilization by agreement with individual countries or blocs where possible (i.e., a managed currency based on national bookkeeping).

IV.

Control of export capital:

(a) To conserve national assets and resources.

(b) To assist American trade, foreign and domestic.

(c) To minimize foreign influence or control over American securities market and American enterprise.

V.

Navy designed to meet American requirements, including defense of the Panama Canal and the Pacific Coast.

VI.

Development of American shipping and communications systems.

VII.

Settlement of disputes by arbitration confirmed by the Senate.

VIII.

In case of wars in Europe or Asia, strict neutrality and avoidance of "moral" judgments on belligerents. Cash and carry policy for direct or indirect trade with belligerents. For the Americas the Monroe Doctrine plus the good-neighbor policy.

The decision between these two viewpoints he maintains must be answered UNEQUIVOCALLY if we are to build our national life and policies soundly.

In what amounts to a definition of INTERNATIONALISM, he makes a comprehensive grouping of practically all the objectives in the field of major policy WHICH PUBLIC OPINION IN THE UNITED STATES OPPOSES, AND WHICH HAVE PROVED SO DISASTROUS TO US IN THE PAST.

It is INTERNATIONALISM which would relax our immigration laws, reduce our tariffs, submit our currency to foreign control through international action, accept naval limitation purely in the interests of foreign Powers and depend on foreign shipping rather than develop an American merchant marine.

These matters he regards just as truly a part of the program of INTERNATIONALISM as would be the submission of our disputes to such tribunals as the World Court, our collaboration with the League of Nations in naming aggressor nations and enforcing League sanctions, or our automatic intervention in the political controversies of Europe and Asia in accordance with the theory of the Kellogg Pact or the Stimson policy of promiscuous "butting in" where we are not concerned.

Surveying the changes which have taken place in international relationships within recent years, which Mr. Peek regards as established, not temporary, he believes that OUR SALVATION LIES IN MAINTAINING STRONGLY AN AMERICAN POINT OF VIEW AND AN AMERICAN POLICY, as contrasted with the internationalist viewpoint and policies of foreign origin.

Even our involvement in foreign wars may hinge upon our making this choice, Mr. Peek believes, and we do not think he exaggerates.

A policy for America clearly involves a genuine enforcement of our immigration laws, to reduce American unemployment and alien influence in our domestic affairs; the preservation of the American home market, American price levels and American employment; tariff reductions only for RECIPROCAL advantages; stabilization of our dollar at an American price level; a Navy adequate for our security; an ADEQUATE merchant marine; and, in the event of war between other nations, a policy of strict neutrality EVEN TO THE POINT OF AVOIDING MORAL JUDGMENTS ON THE BELLIGERENTS.

* * *

WE have never seen the sharp divergence of these viewpoints—the AMERICAN and the INTERNATIONALIST—more effectively presented than in this "deadly parallel."

Like a clear chart, it marks the hidden reefs of foreign entanglement and the shoal waters of weak and confused policy; and, on the other hand, the true course leading to safe harbor and secure anchorage.

THE CHOICE IS ONE, INDEED, WHICH AMERICA MUST MAKE!

"Quack" Doctor Rex

"QUACK" DOCTOR REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, who, according to "Who's Who in America," is Professor of Economics, A. B. S., an A. M., a Ph. D., a member of an academy and almost everything except a sound thinker, illustrates the danger of planting college freshmen in important government positions.

It is said that next to the celebrated Austrian Marxist, Felix Frankfurter, "Wise Guy" Tugwell has had the greatest influence on the administration in its program of one for all and all for Farley.

To illustrate just how wise this doctor of agriculture (who has never lived outside of a text-book) is, let us go back to March 17, 1933, when he appeared before the Senate Agricultural Committee to tell the committee members how large an administrative staff would be necessary under the AAA.

"I should say we would probably have 50 people here in Washington," replied Tugwell with the lightning-like rapidity of congenital ignorance.

In May of this year these 50 persons had grown to 5504 employes in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, with 12,812 persons engaged in resettlement work.

From a humble room in the Agricultural Department, Tugwell has now several magnificent mansions at his disposal, which, if he continues at his present rate of luxurious extravagance—with other people's money—he may soon remodel on Versailles lines, with leaping fountains and "Little Trianons" for his boon-dogglers.

"Apres moi le deluge," quotes Old Doc Tugwell.

The next time this Herald of the Red Dawn appears before a congressional committee with prognostications we recommend for the committee members the salute of Good Brother Ickes:

"WE'RE LAUGHING OUT LOUD, DOC!"

A Worthy Organization

Boys' Clubs are the surest and most direct line of defense against disorder because they eliminate both juvenile delinquency and its sequence, crime.

The Boys' Club organization of Boston has the largest and best equipped plant in the United States. It is staffed with an experienced personnel. It is administered by outstanding business and professional men.

Yet it cannot operate to capacity because it does not receive adequate financial support from the community it protects.

This is an unfortunate situation and should not be permitted to continue. Every dollar donated to the Boys' Club is an investment in the boy of today and the man of tomorrow.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Pickled Peaches" snorts O. O. McIntyre, and proceeds to give the Cocktail Cuties theirs in the December issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

"'Pickled Peaches'—man, how I could love you for that quip—and wish I had beaten you to it.

Isn't it a lovely commentary on what the female sex achieves when granted liberty?

Elsie Robinson

Not—let me hastily add, for both Mr. McIntyre's sake and my own—that we're all like that. There are, praises be, millions who aren't.

But, getting back to the Pickled Peaches—here's where I do my dardnest to add my spiked shingle to O. O.'s velvet mitt. And I'll start by disagreeing.

THAT LAST LINE

It's that last line, Odd. Says you:

"There is nothing about it that gives an opportunity to end this essay on a light note. Save perhaps this: The 1935 girls can take it!"

I don't believe it. You're wrong, my friend. Some, maybe, for which someone else will sign the check.

But not anything for which they themselves must pay the bills.

THEY CAN'T TAKE IT

And that's why I, who am usually as strong for the youngsters, am completely fed up with and out gunning for the Pickled Peaches tribe.

They are not only a poisonous pest, but a shame and disgrace and a wholesale pain-in-the-neck, but I solely proclaim that they're PHONIES. Just a lot of fakers who CAN'T Take It!

They are the Free Souls! But just try and hand them the bill and see how far you get!

Mother and Dad are fossilized dodos. Society is a bunch of Dumb Clucks. They'll show us! Sure they will. But who'll pay the bills? You 'n' I, old dearies, you 'n' I.

Bluff—that's all they have. They wouldn't dare to be free, really free—out on their own, paying their own bills—not for a day. They pass the buck to the Older Generation!

Courage Rules the World

(Picture from Universal Newsreel)

COURAGE!

It is the one human attribute which always, all down through history, has been universally admired.

Not alone does courage enable us to dominate the wild animals of the jungle, as the woman in the picture is dominating her leopards.

It is our unfailing shield and buckler against sorrow and misfortune—and against despair, which is the greatest menace of them all.

But the picture, depicting Olga Celeste of Los Angeles sharing a birthday luncheon with her leopards, makes another thing clear.

It shows that courage is not a masculine monopoly.

In a thousand ways, few of them spectacular, women, daily, all over the world, are displaying courage no whit less indomitable than that required to eat one's meals in a cage of dangerous beasts.

New York Day by Day -:- O. O. McIntyre

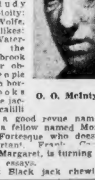
New York, Nov. 29—Thoughts while strolling: For a play or novel title: "Take a Letter!" Norman Kerry with rings in his ears, knife in his teeth and a red turban would make a grand pirate. What became of the ukulele? Rather expect Laurette Taylor to have an Irish brogue. Study in holty-tolty: Elsie de Wolfe. Look-alikes: Larry Waterbury and the late Holbrook Blinn. For oblivion: People who return borrowed books without the jacket. Piccadilli would be a good revue name.



O. O. McIntyre

I know a fellow named Montmorency Fortescue who doesn't act important. French Count's daughter, Margaret, is turning in some fine essays.

Memory: Black jack chewing gum in white paper with tasseled ends. Mark Twain was the only writer to look his part. Never found a newspaperman who didn't swear by Keats Speed. Those well-barbered worldlings who flock in Jack Doyle's billiard hall in the late afternoon.

Marble-in-the-mouth name: Rouben Mamoulian. Mary Lewis almost as thin as in her Follies days. Channing Pollock is beginning to suggest the English squire. And only yesterday he was the boy critic of Washington, D. C. Every other girl looks like Katharine Hepburn these days.

Frank Craven is a sterling actor practically reared in one of those brass-bossed trunks labeled "Theater." But he left the stage flat a few years ago for the rose-bowered serenity of Hollywood. He was through, boys, he was through!

What had Broadway to compare to the spacious lawn, sensibly housed breakfasts in a sunny patio, a kennel of affectionate dogs, an early swing at the golf course under a golden-wooled sky and bed at a reasonable hour?

That was the substance of his gurgle to visiting friends. Yet like the bad penny he's back in the three-fold capacity of directing, dramatizing and acting on the radio once more. And as happy as a lark.

William Gaxton and Victor Moore have gone through one long theatrical run and have finished a year of another, firm friends on and off. Usually such co-starring intimacies cause temperamental upheavals and a feigned friendship for the public only.

But they have never had the slightest dispute. Several times a week they dine together, before going to separate dressing rooms. Incidentally, they have become two of the wealthiest players in the legitimate theater.

From a Communist paper: "McIntyre is forever blubbering about soup box orators spewing discussion around Madison Square."

It will be the story of the 20 harvesters, who, returning from the fields in Scotland, set out in an open boat from Burton Point for the Islands. Only four miles from home were they, by a short route through a dangerous channel. But only one returned, one of the 20; one of a family of eight. That story will be told as Patrick Gallagher tells it today:

"All went well until we reached the narrow part of the sound. My father decided to take a short cut. There was a heavy squall, and he shouted to shorten sail. But before we could act, the boat struck a rock and we all were thrown into the sea. Nine were left clinging to the boat.

"Others I saw throwing up their hands and crying out as they went under. The next thing I remember was a high wave sweeping five away from the boat, and then another wave, which left only my father, my brother Michael and myself.

"We shouted, but nobody heard us. At last my father was overcome, and I cried out to God as I saw him swept away.

"I clung fast to my brother Michael throughout the night and when light appeared I saw a house on the island. I shouted hard and the people heard me. But Michael, who had stripped me, had been cold for a long time."

Church bells toll on Inisheer, Inishmaan and Inishmore. The black-shawled women walk silently, with a faraway look in their eyes. The sturdy fishermen follow after, speaking, if at all, in subdued Gaelic. A melancholy people? Does anyone wonder why?

Tragedy of Aran

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The playwright John M. Synge in his "Riders of the Sea," and "Playboy of the Western World," gave us stirring dramas of the Aran Islands. Last year Robert Flaherty, the motion picture director, came along with a remarkable picture of "Man of Aran" to do for the screen what Synge had done for the stage.

Edwin C. Hill

The islands are three, Inisheer, Inishmaan and Inishmore, and the inhabitants are 1600 Irish, meaning the last outpost of Gaelic speech and traditions.

They live on the three rocks at the mouth of Bay of Galway. The storm, the fog and the stone are bred into them. Since the dawn of Christianity they have fought the elements.

Their whitewashed cottages of stone and plaster are on limestone formations which rise from 200 to 300 feet above the Atlantic. No living thing, save an indomitable race could exist on the black rocks which know neither tree nor grass nor flower.

SWEETEST AND SADDEST

To be sure, there is grass, but only because the Islanders have cultivated it in small patches to provide fodder for cattle and soil for potatoes. The Irish are a people "whose sweetest songs are those which tell the saddest things."

Nowhere is this sweetness more intense than it is among the men of Aran. With if goes the folklore, the stories of the spirits which walk the cliffs at night, or which inhabit the ancient fortress of the old Scottish chieftain, or the ruined monastery of the saints.

Aran was the retreat of religious teachers and ascetics who, in the early days of Christianity, set forth from its bleak rocks to spread the gospel through Europe.

Synge, in the years he spent on Aran, had the "strange sense of exile and desolation." He wrote:

"I walk around nearly every day, yet I can see nothing anywhere but wet rock, a surf and then a tumult of waves."

Fifty years from now another Synge will sit before turf fire in Aran and hear a native tell the tragedy of a night in November, 1935.

It will be the story of the 20 harvesters, who, returning from the fields in Scotland, set out in an open boat from Burton Point for the Islands. Only four miles from home were they, by a short route through a dangerous channel. But only one returned, one of the 20; one of a family of eight.
